Teams set for kickoff of 43rd Old Shoe Game

By CHARLOT M. DENMON Staff Writer

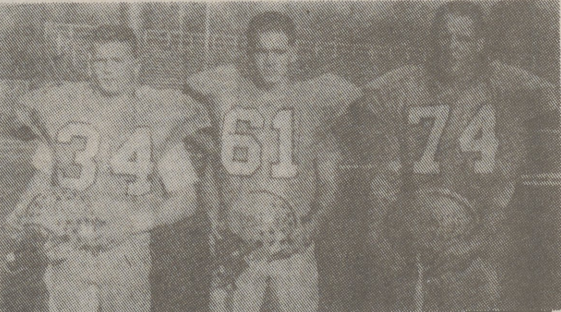

Emotion runs high in the Back Mountain this week as the Dallas Mountaineers and the Lake Lehman Knights prepare to meet in the annual Old Shoe game. The game will be played this Saturday at the Edward Edwards Stadium behind the Lake Lehman Senior High, beginning at 12 Noon.

"Who will win the Old Shoe?" is the question heard in every public gathering place whether post office, grocery store, or restaurant. Only the hard fans are willing to predict the outcome of the traditional contest.

Not even the team coaches are willing to show too much confidence.

"The Old Shoe Game that's the conference all over again. Three seasons results, throw away past performances, anything can happen," said Knights Coach Herb Ferguson.

"It should be a real good game because both schools have good teams. A big play, a mistake, could win the game. This year is unlike other years. These kids on the two teams are good friends until they

Water company wants $36,000 reduction in fees

By RICH JOHNSON Staff Writer

Pennsylvania Gas and Water Company has asked the Jackson Township supervisors to lower building permit fees by about $36,000 on a reconstruction project at the Croswater Dam.

The request was made at the November 5 meeting of the supervisors when two representatives of PG&W asked that the building permit fee be dropped from four percent to one percent for a project at the dam in Pike's Creek.

PG&W is in the planning stages of a $21 million dollar water treatment plant at the dam. Company spokesman Steven Kauffman told the board that the project is one of three that are required in the Wyoming Valley. PG&W will be building a treatment plant for water that will serve customers in Plymouth, Nanticoke, and at the State Correctional Institute at Dallas.

Jeffrey Sunday, a legal representative for PG&W, then asked the supervisors to consider dropping the township's building permit fee for this specific project.

Sunday gave the board many reasons for the request, noting the size and importance of the project. "We are asking for this project."
