Soviet dissident Sharansky to speak March 18

For the seventh consecutive year, there will be a Cooperative Lecture Program sponsored by the Jewish Community Center of Wyoming Valley, College Misericordia, King's College, Penn State Wilkes-Barre, Wilkes University and Luzerne County Community College. Also, joining the cooperative effort for this year is Temple Israel under the auspices of the Altman/Garber Endowment.

The event brings together a comprehensive gathering of all aspects of the community. The sponsors represent all the institutions of higher learning, along with the Jewish Community Center and Temple Israel, making this both an ecumenical and educational venture with broad support.

This year's speaker will be Natan Sharansky, Soviet dissident and human rights activist.

On March 15, 1977, Natan Sharansky was abducted by the KGB from a friend's apartment in downtown Moscow. He was arrested and charged with espionage and treason against the Soviet Union, crimes punishable by death. His next nine years were spent in prison and labor camps, including 400 days in punishment cells and over 200 days on hunger strikes.

Anatoly Sharansky was born on January 20, 1948 in Donnetsk in the Soviet Union, and was educated at the Moscow Institute of Physics and Technology. While working as a computer programmer he became involved in dissident activities, making a special commitment to Soviet Jewish emigration.

In the spring of 1973 Sharansky applied for an exit visa. His application was denied and he was subsequently harrassed by the KGB - subject to random arrests, prevented from joining his wife, Avital, when she left for Jerusalem in 1974 (one day after their marriage), and the object of constant surveillance by the KGB. His implacable conviction to refuse to cooperate with the KGB is the tenet that sustained Sharansky during his years in the gulag. His consistency placed him above suspicion with his fellow prisoners and allowed the KGB no opportunity to break his impenetrable will.

During Sharansky's nine years in Soviet prisons, his wife, Avital, campaigned world-wide for his freedom. Tens of thousands of people wrote to him during his imprisonment and, while he never received them, those letters served as a constant reminder to the KGB that people all over the world cared about his fate.

On February 11, 1986, Soviet authorities finally released him and he joined Avital in Jerusalem, where he formally took the Israeli name, Natan.

Currently, Sharansky serves as leader of the Israel-based Soviet Jewry Zionist Forum, a new organization uniting Soviet Jewry activities and former refuseniks living in Israel.

Natan Sharansky is a man of enormous strength and courage. Roger Rosenblatt has said, "He shows all the fascinating complexities of a hero of Russian fiction but, of course, Sharansky is real."

The Cooperative Lecture is scheduled to take place Monday, March 18, 1991, 7:30 p.m. at Wilkes University Marts Center. The lecture is free and open to the public.

Soviet mathematician to speak at Misericordia

The Soviet approaches to physics and mathematics education will be the topic of a free lecture given by a prominent Soviet mathematician on Tuesday, March 12 at 7 p.m. in College Misericordia's Science Hall. The lecture is open to the public and will be followed by a reception.

Dr. Valery Sanyuk, an associate professor of physics at the People's Friendship University, Moscow, will discuss the "Peculiarities of Physics and Mathematics Education in the Soviet Union." Sanyuk is visiting the United States as a Fulbright scholar and currently is working at Syracuse University.

A native of Slonim, Belorussia, Sanyuk has published extensive research in applied mathematics and physics. He is a member of the Union of Soviet Scientists and the USSR Physical Society.

Sanyuk also will give another free lecture on applied mathematics at noon on Wednesday, March 13 in the Tiered Lecture Room, Administration Building.

For more information on these free public lectures, call 674-6285.
