Antique show and sale to begin May 7

The 39th Annual Prince of Peace Antique Show & Sale will be held on Tuesday, May 7 and Wednesday, May 8, at the Prince of Peace Episcopal Church in Dallas.

Originally conceived by Mrs. Katherine Hall as an opportunity for local antique dealers and collectors to come together and show off the unique antique treasures of this area, this show has run consecutively since 1952. It has become one of the area's most popular and successful, and some of the original dealers went on to become nationally known.

This year, more than a dozen local dealers will be at church, including: Cider Mill Antiques, The Willows. Mary Skoronski. Country Club Antiques, Horseshoe Barn, K & A Treasurers, Patches and Primitive Antiques, Abington Antiques, Scratch Shop, Helen Barna, Bittersweet Antiques (Janet Taylor), Yesterday's Images, Today's Treasures.

As in the past, luncheon will be served daily and dinner will be available Tuesday evening.

Women's Club makes donation to children's library

The Dallas Area Federated Women's Club presented a check to Mrs. Rudolph, the children's librarian at the Back Mountain Memorial Library, to purchase children's books.

Each year the Dallas Women's Club donates to the Back Mountain Library for a specified cause. The club will also man a booth this year at the Library Auction. They will have all types of plants to sell. The plants will be donated to the library and the womens club will be responsible for manpower. Club members also work the block, white elephant, food booths, etc. each year to support our library. Above, presenting the check, from left, are Nancy Kozemchak, manager; Miriam Rudolph, children's librarian; Jean Hillard, president; and Theresa Thompson, scholarship chairperson. ## Speech problems in young children

My child is a year old and hasn't said her first word yet. Is there something wrong with her? How late is too late, and should I take her to the doctor?

The first words are usually spoken around the age of one, but anywhere from ten to fifteen months is considered normal, so don't start worrying yet. However, if your child has experienced any of the following problems know that it is possible that she is at-risk for delayed speech and language development: A difficult delivery, or trauma before birth; ventilation or intubation after delivery due to an inability to breathe on her own; an inability to suck or swallow well; middle ear infections; high fevers that led to seizure; a noticeable lack of babbling or response to others' speech at around six months; cerebral palsy; or general retardation. All of these (as well as other unknown causes) can be precursors to speech and/or language development problems, but not necessarily cause problems.

Knowing why a child is slow to talk is not necessary to begin treating the problem. If you suspect your child is behind in speech and language development, look for a certified and (if the state requires it) licensed speech and language pathologist, or a clinic accredited by the American Speech, Language and Hearing Association. It will be listed as "PSB" or Professional Service Board-accredited.

An important part of the therapist's work is teaching the parents to stimulate the child by talking and using other techniques to encourage development. Therapists and developmental researchers are also interested in trying to predict speech problems early on. An infant that has problems sucking or swallowing should be carefully observed by the parents over the next few months for behavioral cues to future speech troubles. The therapist can also be consulted to help with feeding the child.

Parents of children who have chronic ear infections should be especially watchful of potential problems with speech and language development. Ear infections can cause slight, usually temporary, hearing loss which in turn can delay oral/motor function.
