

Reserve units expected home from Gulf soon

By CHARLOT M. DENMON
Staff Writer

Two Wyoming Valley Reserve Units are expected to return from the Persian Gulf later this month, reuniting several Back Mountain families.

The 300th Field Hospital Reserve Unit members were expected to arrive at Fort Indiantown Gap May 8, if not a day sooner, where they will be met by friends and family before being sent to Hanover Industrial Park.

Paul Walsh of Dallas said that the family had a telephone call from their daughter Kathy, Monday and that the reserves were leaving at 5:00 p.m. Saudi time on Monday and would be due in Philadelphia at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday.

"She said officials are recommending relatives do not come to Philadelphia because unit members will be rushed through to Indiantown Gap and arrival there will be between 10:00 p.m. and Midnight. "We will drive down Wednesday morning to meet her," said Walsh.

The 402nd Military Police PWCP also was getting ready to come home, according to a call Mrs. James Buckley of Dallas received from her husband, Monday, April 29 from the Gulf.

"He said they had not received a date yet when he called," Mrs. Buckley said.

Later, in an official release from the government, it was learned that the 402nd was expected to leave from Saudi Arabia May 18 and arrive at McGuire Air Force Base May 19.

"They will be processed at Fort Dix where their redeployment should last about four days and then they will return to the Hanover Reserve Center where it is hoped to get them through quickly because so many of the Units are now coming through," Mrs. Buckley said.

Mrs. Buckley's husband, James, is the 402nd Unit Administrator. His military rank in the Reserve is Chief Warrant Officer 3.

"Of course the plans are subject to government change," Mrs. Buckley added.

Stock

for the decision to now put legal-sized fish in the lake.

State Representative George Hasay was on hand for the stocking of the fingerlings and said he was pleased to see the state taking an interest in the lake.

"We all have received complaints about the decision not to stock the lake and we are now happy to see that the state has listened to what we have had to say," said Hasay. "We are concerned about the lake and the poor turnout on opening day showed that maybe this wasn't the best way for the Fish Commission to go."

Also on hand was state representative Stanley Jarolin of the 119th District. "I know this isn't my jurisdiction but I also received a number of complaints from fishermen and wanted to help out," he said.

The Fish Commission noted requests from fishermen and the work of Hasay, Jarolin, and state Senator Charles Lemmond all contributed to the decision to stock the larger fish.

The one-year delay in the fingerling program will allow the Fish Commission to conduct surveys and collect additional data before reassessing the program.

The 75,000 fingerling fish which were stocked last week consisted of brook trout and brown trout and will be around for fishermen in the next couple of years, according to the Fish Commission.

Wayne Yorks, a past president of the Fish Commission, said that it will take nearly two years for the fingerlings to reach the size of catchable trout. During that time, the Commission is hopeful that 20 percent of the fingerlings survive.

"Even if only ten percent survive, that is a total of 7,500," said Yorks. "That's more than we normally stock anyway."

Special Election issue next week

The May 15 issue of The Dallas Post will contain articles about the candidates in local and county races. It will be mailed at no charge to an additional 1,500 households in the Back Mountain.
