

Misericordia clears two buildings after bomb scare

College Misericordia evacuated its Administration Building and the adjoining McAuley-Walsh Auditorium for about two hours Tuesday, October 8, after the school learned of a bomb threat.

According to police, a person with a female voice called 911 at 10:17 a.m. and said there was a bomb in the Administration Building that would go off within the hour. The two buildings were evacuated immediately. The caller said the bomb was to "get even," according to police. Dallas Borough, Dallas Township, and state police arrived at the scene, and searched the Administration Building without finding anything.

Misericordia was closed to incoming traffic for about an hour. The buildings were reopened for 12:45 p.m. classes.

Dallas Twp. supervisors will press zoning suit

By ERIC FOSTER
Post Staff

The Dallas Township supervisors has formally directed their solicitor Frank Townend to appeal the township zoning board's ruling that a home for five mentally handicapped men could operate in a area zoned residential. The action came at the supervisors' meeting October 1.

At issue are two interpretations of township ordinances which appear to be at odds with one another.

The zoning board gave the go ahead on the group home at its meeting September 17, based on the ordinance that defines five unrelated persons living in a home as a family.

The supervisors and solicitor Townend argue that the home is a boarding house, a business, and should not be permitted in a residential area.

Supervisor Phil Walter said that there haven't been any problems from the group home for the four months that the men have been living there, but was worried that the home may set a precedent which would allow other businesses to move into the neighborhood.

"We've talked with most of the neighbors and except for the two who are so adamant, they don't seem to mind," said Walter.

Walter said that if the Institute of Human Resources, the non-profit company which operates the group home, originally had gone to the supervisors to ask for an exception, something might have been worked out.

In other business, the township:

- Set curbside leaf pickup for November 18 to 22. If residents wish to dispose of their leaves earlier, they can take them to the compost pile at the township building.

- Changed the November meeting to Monday, November 4, because of the election on Tuesday, November 5.
