Finally...

true & effective relief from eyestrain and headaches caused by computer use.

What is Visual Noise?

Anything over and above what we need for efficient and comfortable vision constitutes visual noise. Just as background noise is distracting for proper hearing, excess and distracting light sources become visual noise.

within the electromagnetic spectrum. In effect, it is an optical filter. As a result of looking at the VDT screen for a lengthy period of time, the eye becomes more sensitive to a wide range of visual "noise", including VDT phosphor emissions, fluorescent light, sunlight, glare and reflections. After the patented AVN chemical treatment is applied, lenses are anti-reflection and smudge-proof coated. The AVN process can be applied to all prescription and non-prescription lenses, made of ultra-strong polycarbonate, plastic and the new, light & thin high-index plastic.

COMMON VDT SYMPTOMS:

- Headaches
- Eyestrain
- Irritated eyes
- Blurred vision
- Slow refocusing when looking from copy or screen to distant objects
- Frequently losing your place when moving your eyes between copy and screen
- Difficulty seeing clearly at distance after prolonged VDT use.

The growth of this problem was documented in a University of California study which estimated that approximately 10 million Americans visited eye specialists in 1989 complaining of symptoms resulting from VDT use.

AVN is the Solution

AVN stands for anti-visual noise. It's a patented chemical process that treats eyeglass lenses to eliminate specific frequencies

Treated lenses retain an attractive "blush" color.*
