the projected increase in expenditures, according to preliminary figures released by the borough council.

It all adds up to $5,000 less in revenues than expenditures, though the 1992 figures included $50,000 from a tax anticipation note that is not part of the 1993 budget. Spending in 1993 is estimated at $466,850 against revenues of $461,657.

In 1992, Dallas Borough had increased its property tax from 14 to 16 mills and doubled the per capita tax to $10.

The preliminary budget will be available for public inspection at the Dallas Borough building until December 15, when the council will consider it for final approval.

Harveys Lake Borough Council President Richard Boice said that the 1993 budget will be about the same as the 1992 budget. The budget's first reading was at the November 17 meeting and the figures will probably change by the second reading.

"We have a $104 surplus, but the figures are subject to change by the second reading as we go over the line items," Boice said.

The borough expects an estimated revenue of $554,850, an increase of $52,572 from 1992 according to Boice. Harveys Lake expects expenditures of $568,080 compared to 1992 expenses of $539,320.

Although the total expenditures compared to revenue suggests a deficit, Boice said that there will be no new taxes and the borough's finances are in good shape.

"The proposed budget shows a deficit of $13,230, but in reality, the carryover from liquid fuels money will add about $35,000 to the budget," Boice said.

Money which is carried over from the previous year cannot be added to the budget, Boice said. "The liquid fuel money is designated to only be spent on liquid fuel and cannot be spent on anything else," Boice said.
