Susquehanna steamboats come to life at July 15 talk

The Wyoming Historical & Geological Society of Wilkes-Barre will present a slide lecture by F. Charles Petrillo of Wilkes-Barre on Thursday, July 15, at 7:15 p.m., as part of the Society's Centennial Lecture series. The Society is celebrating the 100th anniversary of its museum, built in 1893. The museum is located behind the Osterhout Library on South Franklin Street in the heart of the city.

Steamboat navigation on the Susquehanna River was attempted in the mid-1820s between York and the New York State line, but commercial passage along the shallow river proved too impractical. Limited steamboat service to haul passengers and freight was again tried in the early 1850s between Tunkhannock and Wilkes-Barre. Between 1875 and 1900 there was regular steamboat service on the Susquehanna River among the ports of Pittston,

Wilkes-Barre, Plymouth and

Petrillo has written widely on Susquehanna River history. In 1986 the Center for Canal History and Technology in Easton published his book "Anthracite & Slackwater: The North Branch Canal 1828-1901." He has also published articles on the river's art history and other canal systems. In August the historical society will publish his latest book "Steamboats on Susquehanna: The Wyoming Valley Experience." He has previously produced a history of Harveys Lake steamboats in his book entitled "Harveys Lake" published by the local society in 1991.

The lecture will be held at 7:15 p.m. at First United Methodist Church (across from Irem Temple), 47 N. Franklin St., in Wilkes-Barre. The lecture is free to the public, but seating is limited.

Embroiderers' Guild to meet July 21

The Wyoming Valley Chapter of The Embroiderers' Guild of America, Inc. will hold its regular meeting on Wednesday, July 21, at 7 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church, Franklin and Northampton Sts., Wilkes-Barre. This month's program is "Christmas in July" featuring miniature ornaments for holiday decorating.

For more information regarding this and other Chapter activities, call Alice Rae Kutish, 288-5342, Beverly Marchetti, 675-4841 or Donna Morgan, 287-7245.
