

Golf club

have a lot of older courses in this area that have been established and have brought along the golfing community. So when we entered the market, so to speak, we found there were a lot of people looking for that next level, the higher level of amenities, that higher level of golf course."

At least one member is already impressed.

"This is a first-rate place to play golf," said member Tony Kupriunas, a Back Mountain resident who was taking advantage of the practice facility. "I live very close to the course and I drive by it every day. I see it taking shape, see it changing colors, it's fantastic. This practice area is unbelievable. It's (the practice area) better than most of the courses around here. I think this is going to be a fine addition to our community."

Lumia agrees that the Back Mountain community will benefit from the club, which currently employs 25 people.

"I think it's excellent for the community," said Lumia, who stated that the club will begin a caddy program when the course is complete. "It will also provide a number of good jobs. It's clean and nice to look at. I think the community at large is pretty much happy with it."

Club pro Tim Foran thinks each time a member plays the course, it will be a new experience.

"I think every round can be a different experience," said Foran. "We'll have up to five teeing areas for each hole and some of the holes will have up to 13 different tee possibilities. So you're always going to have a different test of golf for whatever level of play."

"This is going to be a members' golf course, first and foremost," added Foran. "The service we will render here will be as good as you can get anywhere. We think the quality of the clubhouse amenities, the instruction and the caddy program will be first class. That in itself is, perhaps, welcome in the community."

END OF THE FRONT NINE - The par 5, 580-yard 9th hole offers an undulating, bunker-protected fairway and green and plenty of wide open spaces. The front nine, scheduled to open in September, plays 3,500 yards.

DOWNHILL 2nd - The second hole, a 390-yard par 4 with a dogleg left, starts with a steep downhill tee shot.

1st TARGET - The starting hole's green is guarded on the right by a long bunker. Strong hitters may try to reach the 500-yard par 5 in two.

TRY IT THIS WAY - Huntsville Golf Club golf director Tim Foran, left, gives founding director David Hall a few tips to improve his swing. The course includes a 440-yard long, double-ended practice area for driving, putting, bunker and pitching practice.

TEMPORARY QUARTERS - Until the clubhouse is completed, a brick farmhouse on Hayfield Road serves as golf shop and administrative headquarters. Membership director Paul Lumia is shown on the front porch of the restored building.

7th FAIRWAY - Paul Lumia, director of membership for the Huntsville Golf Club, looks over the approach from the left side of the 7th fairway. The fairway on the 420-yard par 4 is flanked by undulating mounds dotted with sand traps.

How to join

Members are required to purchase a $15,000 bond, which pays 8 percent interest and is redeemable in 20 years. In addition, members who join in 1993 will be required to pay a $4,000 initiation fee in 1994. Annual dues are projected at between $3,200 and $3,600. Non-resident and junior memberships are available. For more information and a personal tour, contact Paul Lumia, Director of Membership, at 825-7499, or Golf Pro Tim Foran at 674-FORE. Set tours are given every Thursday at 5:30 p.m. and Saturdays at 10 a.m. through the summer.
