Rural Leadership taking applications

The Pennsylvania Rural Leadership Program is now accepting applications for the Fall 1993 term until August 31 for Class V. RULE is open to all adult rural Pennsylvania residents interested not only in improving their leadership skills, but also in improving the quality of life in their local communities. The first year, the emphasis is on resolving local, regional and state issues, while the second year focuses on national and international issues. Participants take an active role in the learning process and in program development. New skills are directly and immediately applicable to current public issues and personal growth. The program focuses on developing personal skills in these four areas: organizational skills, process skills, personal leadership and specific community issues. Selections of participants will incorporate those from diverse backgrounds with different interests and goals and a demonstrated commitment to community involvement and solving public issues. Class fellows are based primarily in rural areas and must be at least 25 years of age. The RULE Program is a partnership between the public and private sectors with funds from individual participants, sponsoring organizations, private and public contributors, the Pennsylvania State legislature, the Pennsylvania Department of Community Affairs, and The Pennsylvania State University. RULE fellows are admitted without regard to age, ancestry, color, disability, or handicap, national origin, race, religious creed, political affiliation, sex, sexual orientation, or veteran status. Applicants will vie for one of 30 positions in the RULE V class. Consideration will be given to an applicant's experience, needs, and potential. Requests for applications or information can be addressed to J.D. Dunbar, Chief Executive Officer, RULE, The Pennsylvania State University, 7 Armsby Building, University Park, PA 16802 or call (814) 863-4679.
