PSU will offer four-year degree in surveying

A new engineering degree is being instituted by Penn State's College of Engineering, available at the Wilkes-Barre Campus. The Board of Trustees of the University gave final approval to the new degree at their meeting Friday, March 18 in Hershey. The new degree, to be initiated in the fall 1994 at the Wilkes-Barre Campus, is a bachelor of science in surveying. The new degree is the first four-year surveying degree, not only at Penn State, but in Pennsylvania. Professional surveying engineers instrumental in advocating for the new degree, and in advising on its curriculum were professor Jack Kolesar of Swoyersville, and Shavertown resident Dr. Charles Ghiliani, current department head. The Wilkes-Barre Campus is already receiving applications from persons interested in the surveying degree.
