Fixing may make more sense than buying

"Low, low monthly payments" are a big selling point in new car advertising. The fine print often discloses that these are lease payments. Lease or otherwise, the on-camera salesman makes $250 sound like chicken feed.

For many prospective car buyers that "chicken feed" would go a lot further in the immediate needs of the car you already own. It covers the cost of a brake system overhaul or a major tune-up PLUS that long overdue oil change.

It might pay for two new tires and a battery or for other needs that press a person to go car shopping.

Car leasing or lower monthly finance payments help ease the sting of higher new car prices. But statistics demonstrate that owners are fixing up and driving their older cars. Average car age is at its highest since the early 1950's.

For many of us, the handwrit-ing is on the wall," says Don Midgley of Car Care Council. "In many cases it is wiser to accept one whopping repair bill and hang on to the old car or truck than to commit to a hefty monthly payment for 4 or 5 years."

This is the subject of a pam-

BRAKES

Your braking system, probably the most critical safety system on your car, is like an extension of your body. When your brain tells your foot to push down on the brake pedal for a panic stop, you expect instant, predictable response.

Don't gamble with your brakes; have them checked periodically and when you do need repairs, invest in the best quality brake service you can get.

SCRATCHES AND DINGS

When your car gets bumped or scraped in a parking lot or accidentally bruised on the street, don't ignore the damage—it won't go away. It's likely to get worse as rusting sets in.

Body repairs, even minor ones, pay big dividends, says the Car Care Council. A car that looks good and runs well brings significantly more at trade in than one that's been neglected.

phlet published by the Council which says, "When an aging car needs repairs, too often the solution lies in the quickest route to the car dealers showroom. But supposing the amount of the down payment (plus a little extra) were spent on the old car instead, making it serviceable for at least another year?"

One thing is certain: whatever repairs your car, truck or van needs, it probably won't cost as much as buying a new one. "And it's not a long term commitment,"
