Rookie chairman impressed by effort

When auction chairman Joe Kluger moved from Kingston to the Back Mountain two years ago, he discovered the area's family and community spirit are alive at the Back Mountain Memorial Library.

"To me, the auction epitomizes the Back Mountain's community spirit—literally hundreds of people volunteering to work on one four-day event to benefit the library," he said.

To make the auction truly a family affair, the entire Kluger family has given up its customary vacation during July 4 week to help out.

Kluger's sister, Elizabeth Cooper, Esq., her husband and baby will come in from their home in Pittsburgh, while brother Lawrence Kluger will drive in from Harrisburg.

Kluger said that several auction-related events, such as the horse show, won't run this year, making the committee's work more of a challenge.

"We have to make up for the loss of these funds, while keeping it in mind that we must raise at least 25 percent of the library's budget," he said. "State and county aid account for only 30 percent of the library's funding."

Kluger emphasized the library's importance to the nine communities which it serves: learning tools for students, research references for the business community, special services for the home-bound and free entertainment for those on fixed incomes.

"The library truly is the people of the community," he said.
