GOING HIGH-TECH - Tobi Grossman from the Continuing Education Department of Penn State Wilkes-Barre demonstrates the new microcomputer laboratory at the campus in Lehman. A September 8th Open House is planned from 4-8 p.m. A wide variety of microcomputer workshops will be available to the general public this fall, and customized training is offered for area businesses.

PSU to offer new microcomputer courses

New for the 1994-95 academic year at Penn State Wilkes-Barre is a state-of-the-art microcomputer laboratory at the Campus in Lehman.

A September 8th Open House is planned for the public to visit the lab from 4-8 p.m.

The lab houses 20 computer workstations, a file server, three laser printers, a color projection system, an ink jet plotter and a scanner.

The lab is equipped with the most current releases of the most popular software packages, which will be demonstrated at the open house and public workshops begin the following week and are scheduled both daytime and evening.

Customized microcomputer training is available to businesses interested in keeping their employees computer-current, according to Continuing Education Representative Janet Rosenbaum who is planning usage of the lab.

For an invitation to the free Open House, or specific information on available workshops and a brochure, contact Ms. Rosenbaum at 675-9102.
