Children's Christmas story will begin next week

An original children's Christmas story, "Mossback's Search for Santa," by T.T. Cratchit, will appear in The Dallas Post over four consecutive weeks, beginning with the November 30 issue. The story depicts Mossback the Frog's determination to go to the North Pole to find out why Santa never visits him. He's convinced Santa just hates frogs. Along the way, he meets some other animals who change his perspective, leading to the climax in the December 21 issue. The series will carry original illustrations by Abington Journal cartoonist Tony Comstock. This is the second year that The Post has offered an original story as a Christmas present to children. Last year, "Rudolph is Missing," by George Bailey, presented and solved the mystery of Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer's ominous disappearance.
