ough for ten years and is a member of the Harveys Lake Investors' Club.

He studied business administration at Luzerne County Community College before going into the family business, started by his father, Joseph, and brother, Joseph "Marty" Callahan, Jr.

Eaton, a registered nurse and co-owner of Damien's restaurant, has lived in the borough for 4 1/2 years. She is a graduate of the NPW School of Nursing and is the secretary of the Harveys Lake Business Association and a member of the Harveys Lake Women's Club (GFWC).

She's running for council because she believes the borough has no management.

"The council members run in different directions," she said. "They work on their own individual committees, but rarely report to council. They pass ordinances which don't have any teeth. Are they honestly trying to do something positive for the community or are they simply filling up a seat?"

Describing the borough as "a unique community with vast economic differences among its residents," Eaton pointed out that it has a large area at its center, the lake, which doesn't generate any taxes.

Christopher Hinton, manager of the Radio Shack in Kingston, has lived in the borough seven years. He is an assistant scoutmaster in his son's Boy Scout troop and also volunteers his time doing electrical work for the Luzerne County Fair.

He is running for council because he believes a major rule of business: you have to give back to the area that supports you.

"I have a strong background in sales management and business, which I would like to apply to the operation of the borough," he said. "My training would help the borough account for everything it spends by preparing and using profit and loss statements, realistic planning of budgets, controlling expenses and management of resources. Increases in the borough's income have not been followed by significant increases in the quality of services, saving of money or improvement of the roads. I offer direction and control of the borough's finances."

Spock, who has lived in the borough for 14 years, is a correspondent and columnist for the Suburban News, secretary of the environmental advisory committee and planning and zoning commissions, a crossing guard and the former assistant borough secretary. She is also a member and past elected officer of the D. C. Roberts Volunteer Fire Company Auxiliary and a member of the Harveys Lake Women's Club (GFWC), for which she writes the newsletter.

Her husband, Ron, is the borough's assistant police chief, but is off from work due to a disability.

If elected, Spock wants a united council which will work together for the best interests of the residents.

"The elderly and the teens are two forgotten age groups at the lake," she said. "I would like to use the borough's recreation center to set up a teen center with games and activities so the young people don't have to leave the borough for entertainment, and to hold social activities and community projects there for the senior citizens."

She also wants to work closely with Mayor Rick Boice to improve the police department and upgrade the officers' working conditions.

Miscavage is seeking his third term on council, having served a two-year and a four-year term, and is a past president. He has worked with the planning board, road department, recycling committee, environmental advisory committee and the recreation center.

During his time on council, he worked on the borough's wetlands delineation map and saw the upgrading of many borough dirt roads and the tar and chip road project at the Keefer Plot.

A self-employed contractor, he is a member of Our Lady of Victory Church.

If reelected, Miscavage wants to develop the recreation center, which he calls the borough's untapped resource.

"We need a teen center with games and activities for the young
