

Dr. Carol Jobe resigns from Misericordia's presidency

Carol A. Jobe, Ph.D., tenth president of College Misericordia, announced June 9 that she will leave her office effective June 30, 1995.

Dr. Jobe, who assumed the post July 1, 1992 as the first woman lay president in the Catholic College's 70 year history, said she has accomplished her goals at Misericordia and is interested in pursuing new challenges.

"The past three years have been an exciting and invigorating time," Dr. Jobe said. "I have enjoyed my stay in Northeast Pennsylvania, and am pleased to have taken part in some of the many fine community projects carried out over the past three years."

Her future plans are not yet completed, she noted.

Dr. Sarah Ellen Lenahan, '68 chair of the Misericordia Board of Trustees, commended Dr. Jobe's

leadership and her work on behalf of Misericordia and the community.

The Board will conduct a search immediately for an interim president, and hopes to appoint the interim president as soon as possible, Dr. Lenahan added. The interim president will serve for an undetermined period of time while a national search for a president is carried out.

Among her many accomplishments, Dr. Jobe lists leadership in the development of a shared governance system at Misericordia, which enables all members of the College community to take part in all levels of the college's decision-making process.

Prior to accepting the presidency at Misericordia, Dr. Jobe served as president of Mater Dei College in Ogdensburg, NY, for three years.
