

Vo-tech

Seventy-nine students from the Dallas district were scheduled to begin the year at Vo-Tech, but 12 have already returned to the Dallas schools, said high school principal Frank Galicki.

Adding to the uncertainty around the project is a lawsuit by Wyoming Valley West School District, seeking the ability to withdraw from the Vo-Tech compact in the future. Superintendent Gerald Wycallis suggested that Valley West is seeking veto power over Vo-Tech operations. About 60 percent of Vo-Tech students come from that district, although its portion of the renovation project would be only $2.3 million.

School board solicitor Atty. Ben Jones asked what the interest rate on the proposed bond issue to finance the project was, and suggested the 5.78 percent figure cited by Ashbridge was high for such a project.

After more discussion, most board members felt that more information was needed before Dallas could make any commitment to the project. George, still contending the entire project should be done, said a meeting between the architects and all five school boards could be arranged.

The rest of the board then agreed with Ashbridge that the Dallas representatives should not vote to approve the project at the next Vo-Tech meeting.

In other business, Wycallis assured Joan Byron, who represented parents of students at the Wyoming Seminary Upper School, that bus transportation to and from the school would be established within a few weeks. Byron said 18 students now lack transportation to Wyoming Seminary.

Both Wycallis and Ashbridge reminded the board that such a route had existed several years ago, but use dwindled so low that it was eliminated and replaced with vouchers.

Wycallis complimented staff, parents and students on what he termed a very smooth school opening, with few glitches. Board member James Richardson reflected the accolades back to Wycallis, commenting with a chuckle, "After 10 years, you finally got it right."

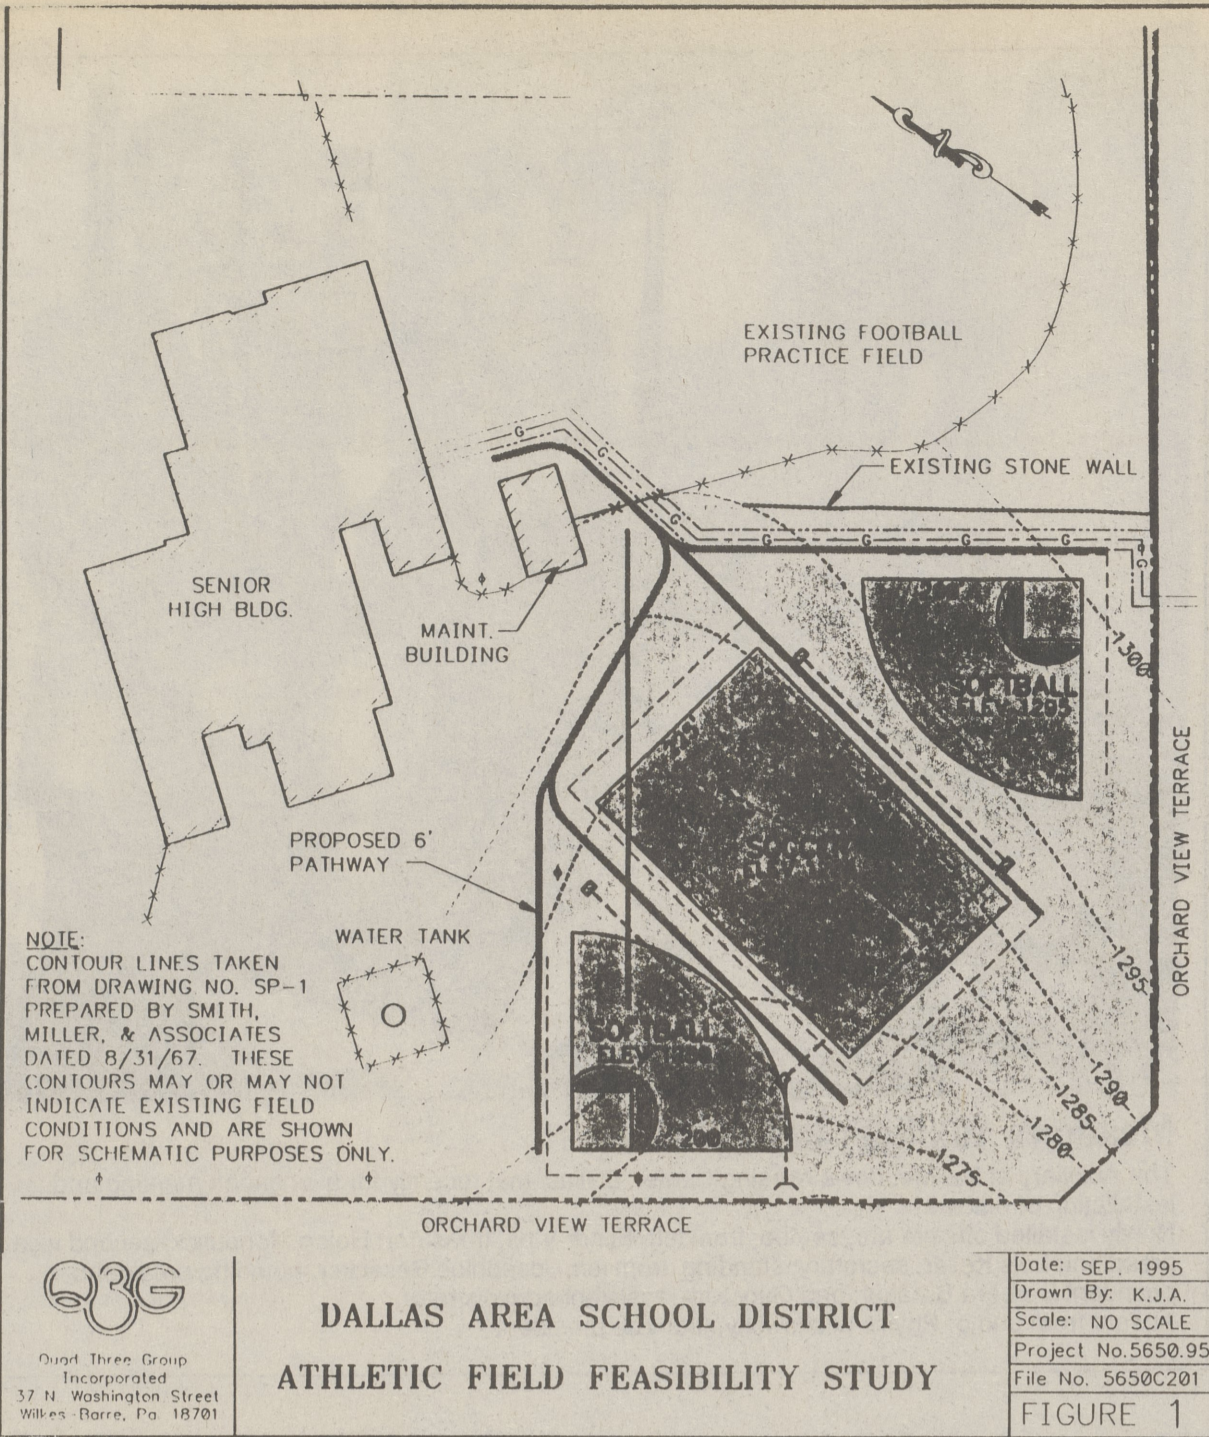

The board also voted to award a contract for modifications necessary to meet the Americans with Disabilities Act to King Glass and Paint, the low bidder at $44,702, $14,000 below the next lowest bid and $29,000 below the high bid.

Plan presented for Dallas school fields

Jim Piggott, a professional engineer working for the Quad Three Group of Wilkes-Barre, presented the Dallas School Board with a plan to build two softball fields and a soccer field on land adjacent to the high school prior to the board's meeting Sept. 11.

The plan places the fields in the southern corner of the 100-acre property owned by the district, with streets in Orchard View Terrace bordering two sides. A cost estimate included with the presentation projected expenses of nearly $400,000, not including fencing, lights, parking, or paved access paths.

The fields would be 25 to 60 feet from the nearest residential property lines on Westminster Drive. School board member Clarence Michael asked if the fields could be moved any further. "I'd like to see the fields as far from the residential areas as possible," he said.

Piggott said minor relocations might be possible

Supervisors oust 2 members of planning commission

By JOHN SANSEVERE
Post Correspondent

FRANKLIN TWP. - The Franklin Township board of supervisors voted 2-to-1 September 5 to call for the resignation of planning commission members Ed Dorrance and Frank Hilstolsky because of unspecified conduct by the two members, and suspended authority of the planning commission, until the matter is resolved.

Board members would not comment on the action until and if Dorrance and Hilstolsky wish to make the issue public at a September 26 meeting the supervisors have called to discuss the issue.

John Actukewicz, attorney for the supervisors, sent a letter on September 6 to Dorrance and Hilstolsky notifying them of the board's action and informing them of the hearing.

The board also suspended the planning commission's authority to approve future subdivision applications for 30 days, due to the unspecified problems.

The board of supervisors gave the planning commission authority to approve subdivision applications on January 1, 1995.
