The commission unanimously accepted five applications:

- The Toby Humphrey subdivision of three lots on Cider Run Road.
- The Larry and Nancy Brace subdivision of two lots on Orange Road.
- The Catherine Nemecek subdivision of two lots on Coon Road.
- The Bedford subdivision of three lots on Orange Road.
- The Windy Timber subdivision of four lots on Brace Road. Owned by Robert and Kim Gashi, this parcel is primarily located in Northmoreland Township and has been approved by Wyoming County.

Commission members scanned a list of questions on the new zoning ordinance at the request of the supervisors.

"Let the supervisors decide," said chairman Mark Millington.

attorney Alan Kluger, who told him the supervisors violated the spirit if not the letter of the Sunshine Law.

The supervisors said they appointed Granger because he might be needed to cast a vote on the Reese property, tabled until the October 19 meeting, if the other planning commission members made a tie vote. Roger Belles said he would abstain from voting on the Reese property because he works for them.

If Mark Millington and Hank Psolka, the two remaining commission members, had voted opposite each other on the Reese property, a tie-breaker would have been needed.

His vote wasn't needed after all because the Reese family agreed to keep their land zoned agricultural, with their topsoil mining operation registered as a special use.

Granger had abstained from voting October 9, although he voted with the remaining commission members at the October

Questions involve rezoning Clover Hill Meadows from agricultural (A-2) to residential (R-1), adding Maria Drive to the zoning map, adding more area to the residential districts and adding a mining district.

The supervisors also asked if the planning commission would consider retaining the two agricultural districts instead of combining them. The minimum lot size in the A-1 district would increase from two to three acres and from one to two acres in the A-2 district.

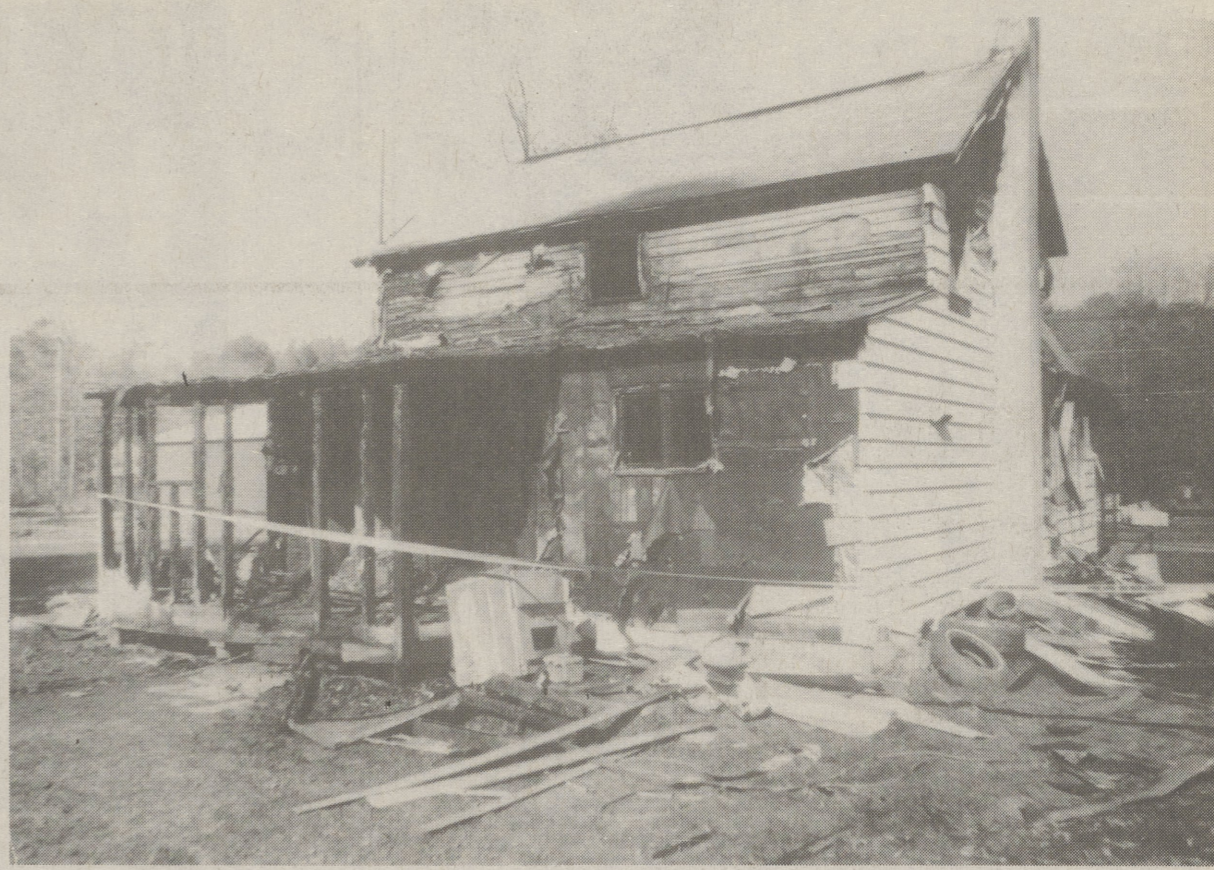

The supervisors will discuss the revised zoning ordinance at their November 6 meeting and send any changes to the planning commission, which will discuss them at their regular November 21 meeting. The supervisors plan to accept public comments and adopt the ordinance at their regular December 4 meeting.

The home was insured, and Tina Young said so far it looked like they would receive payments, but they may not do more than pay off their debts. "By the time we pay off the mortgage there may not be much left," she said. The Youngs had just recently replaced the roof, and taken out a second mortgage to pay for the work. They also had remodeled the three-bedroom upstairs.

No one was home at the time the fire broke out, but Tina Young had just stopped in to pick up something from the house. Two of her children were in the car when she heard a smoke alarm, saw smoke and called the fire department from a neighbor's home. She also was able to rescue the family dog, which was tied out in the backyard. Tropical fish in a large aquarium didn't fare so well. "They were cooked," Charles Young said.

The Youngs have three boys of their own, ages 6, 4 and 3 months, and a foster child. The 6-year-old was in school at the time of the fire. For now the whole family is staying with Tina Young's parents in West Wyoming, along with her younger brothers and sisters.

Tina Young said investigators told her the fire started in the clothes dryer, which was located at the back of the kitchen, to the rear of the house, the area that suffered the most damage.

Charles and Tina Young and their four children were burned out of the Lower Demunds Road home Charles grew up in. The fire last Tuesday left the home a total loss. The family includes three young boys and a foster daughter. The Back Mountain Kiwanis Club has begun a drive to raise funds and collect clothing and household goods for the family. The club has set up an account at Franklin First Savings Bank in Dallas, and is accepting items at Chili Willie's Restaurant on Route 415 in Dallas. "You're creating a big bunch of confusion," Granger told Futch October 17. "I had no effect on anything, but it doesn't make any difference. From this point I'm off the planning commission - it looks like I'm here illegally."

Granger was appointed October 9 to replace chairman Ed Dorrance, who had resigned September 25 "for the good of the township" after supervisors' chairman Robert Redmond demanded it. No reasons have been given for the supervisors' demand.

The supervisors also removed Frank Hilstolsky from the commission after a hearing September 26.

Their care is so special, so unique, that the name itself-- Hospice Saint John -- has come to mean very special things to very special people. In fact the name itself -- Hospice Saint John -- is copyrighted and is the only trademarked hospice care program in the region.

There may be other hospice care programs, but there is only one Hospice Saint John, and they have been privileged to serve the terminally ill and their families for the past 17 years.
