This marks the first time that Dallas has won any awards at the competition, and Storz is very proud of her pupils. "There was no class time used to work on these projects, so they did most of it at home and after school, and it proves that students can balance academics with a hectic schedule," she said.

Both groups are quick to credit Storz for her guidance. "She was a big help, whenever we needed it," said West. Vodzak added, "She helped us coordinate everything, and became our mentor." Storz, however, chooses to downplay her role. "My job was mainly to get them started brainstorming, and to help them in their organization and preparation," she said.

The students also gained personally from their work. "It really taught us what teamwork was all about," said West. Robert Webb added, "It gave us a tremendous sense of accomplishment."

The two groups are now making improvements on their displays, in preparation for the state competition. "They received feedback sheets at the regional competition, and they're using the criticism on those to better the displays," said Storz.

Depending on the outcome of the state competition, there is also a possibility the students could go to the national competition, to be held in Maryland in June. "It's a real credit to the students that they've come this far," said Storz.

Going to state competition are Jennifer Vodzak, left; Gwen Zarambo, kneeling, and Sarah Williams. Their subject was the American revolutionary group, the Sons of Liberty.

Area artists' work in Sem juried show

The works of area artists Keith Hunter, Dallas; Ann Parkhurst, Shavertown; Marshall D. Rumbaugh, Dallas; and Peggy Scholl, Dallas, will be featured in the Wyoming Seminary Regional Juried Art Show to be held April 13-26 on the Kingston campus of Wyoming Seminary.

These artists' work are among 50 chosen by author and critic Hilton Kramer from more than 450 from a 150-mile radius of Kingston submitted for the show.

Kramer will present a free public lecture at 5:30 p.m. April 13, in the Buckingham Performing Arts Center, followed by a preview reception at the gallery in the Stettler Learning Resource Center on North Sprague Avenue.

Tickets for the reception are $20, and must be purchased prior to the event. The event will be open to the public free of charge April 14-26; regular gallery hours are 8:30-4:30 p.m. weekdays, 1-4 p.m. weekends. For more information about the show, contact Karen Evans Kaufer at Wyoming Seminary: 283-6040.

Friends, associates will honor Dr. Fahmy

By GRACE R. DOVE

DALLAS - Well-known educator and former Dallas School Board member Dr. Mahmoud Fahmy will be honored for his many contributions to the community at a banquet April 24.

Recently retired from Wilkes University, Fahmy began teaching there 30 years ago as a professor of education, later serving as special assistant to the president for external affairs and dean of graduate affairs and continuing education.

He is president of Luzerne County Community College's board of directors, a member of College Misericordia's Diversity Institute and the chairman of the International Trade Development Council of Northeast PA.

"He has a passion for the area which is unparalleled..."

Dr. Fahmy is also an international education consultant and has provided far-reaching volunteer leadership to the community in education and civic and human services.

To honor his many contributions to the area, a scholarship has been established to assist graduates of Luzerne County Community College who continue their education at Wilkes.

"Dr. Fahmy has helped the region to be competitive in the worldwide economy," said Howard Grossman of the Economic Development Council, describing Fahmy as "a humanitarian with global interests and international connections."

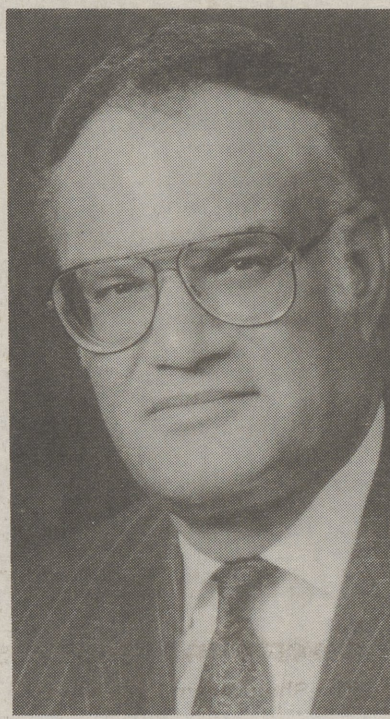

"He's a man for all seasons, involved in community, regional, national and international issues," Grossman continued. "His tremendous abilities to rationalize problems and be involved in a wide variety of issues all at the same time are an asset to the area. Dr. Fahmy sees people not as objects but in terms of what they can contribute as individuals to society."

Committee member Joseph Persico is impressed with Dr. Fahmy's commitment and dedication to the community, particularly its youth.

"He's a real champion of education," Persico said. "He has a passion for the area which is unparalleled and is a great asset to the community."

Attorney Harold Rosenn has known Dr. Fahmy for about 25 years.

"He came here as a stranger from a foreign country and adapted himself to become a pillar of the community and a leader with great commitment," Rosenn said. "Dr. Fahmy is a pillar of strength who has found a true place here."
