very highly of our efforts and programs.

On one occasion a trooper working at the state police exhibit came over to see me and my fellow officer and told us of a young girl who was intrigued by the mounted animals. She asked him if they were real and he acknowledged that they were. She then asked how we taught them to sit so still! WCO Joseph G. Wenzel.

Officers hear many excuses from those who have committed a violation. In the past, I have written a field note or two highlighting some of the more unusual ones.

When it comes to littering, I have heard things like "someone must have stolen my garbage" or "I was helping the state by putting it there so they could pick it up".

Recently, after watching a man toss a beer can onto State Game Lands, his only excuse was "It was just a reflex." - a bad reflex I might add. WCO Joseph G. Wenzel

On Friday, Sept. 13 WCO Jim Jolley and I were called to rescue a bear in a tree. After three frustrating hours, we finally managed to tranquilize the bear but it stayed put, 60 feet up in a large pine tree. The fire company brought in a 120 ft. ladder truck with a platform, which Officer Jolley, a volunteer, a police detective and I used to bring the bear out of the tree and onto the platform.

As we were coming down, the large crowd and onlookers broke out singing "For He's A Jolley Good Fellow." Now how did they know that? WCO J. Christopher Heil

PHYLLIS MUNDY IN A WORD — EFFECTIVE.

Bringing back home the tax dollars you send to Harrisburg. Fighting to create new jobs and save existing ones. Listening to you at countless one-on-one sessions, forums and town meetings. These are the hallmarks of State Representative Phyllis Mundy's service.

All her constituents in the Back Mountain know Phyllis Mundy feels everybody across the 120th District should be heard and ... helped.

She's dedicated herself to serving full-time the people she represents.

Phyllis Mundy started the wheels in motion with economic development officials to relocate 100 new jobs here from New Jersey. She helped save rail service for four major employers. There are now traffic lights at dangerous intersections in Kingston, Exeter, West Pittston and the Back Mountain because of Phyllis Mundy's persistence. She had PennDOT erect sound barriers along the Cross Valley Expressway. In short, Phyllis Mundy gets things done.
