Senior guard Ron Sutton, along with fellow seniors Jason Campbell at forward and Mark Shanaberger at guard/forward look to serve as leaders, but are inexperienced. Junior guards Ed Piekara and Jeff Parker will also look to be in coach Tripler's rotation.

The youth movement will begin with three sophomores, center

John Saba, and guards J.J. Smith and Dan Nichols. Rounding out the group are freshmen Matt Jackson and Matt Wycallis.

Tripler believes his team's speed may be its best attribute. "We will play an aggressive style of basketball and try to utilize our speed. We want to be competitive, but we have a lot to learn. At this point, we are still teaching," Tripler said.

According to Bearde, he may be one of the best high jumpers in the area.

With a starting lineup that is laden with seniors, Bearde believes the younger players coming off the bench need to play well to give the team balance.

Bearde will be looking to juniors Mike Sudal, Mike Davis and Ed Sichler, sophomore Matt Morris and freshman Matt Loftus to give the Knights a boost off the bench. Lehman will play all AAAA teams in its exhibition schedule, hoping to gain experience against the bigger schools.

The Knights will need to get quickly if they hope to knock off divisional foe Meyers. "Meyers only lost one player from last year, they will be very strong," said Bearde. "G.A.R. also looks to have one of the best teams they've had in a while. If we survive December we will be okay."
