the close games we've played."

Rounding out the starting lineup are juniors Kelly Spencer, Darby Wolfe and Mandy Kehler.

Spencer, a returning all conference selection at guard, leads the team with 15.0 points per game and is also a tenacious defender with five steals per game.

Wolfe, a forward, averages 13.0 points and 7.5 rebounds per game. Kehler, the center, has also been outstanding on the boards.

Junior Marisa Michaels provides depth at forward and guard and is the team's top three-point threat. She nailed four three-pointers against Dallas.

According to Morgan, the key to Lehman's success in the first half was its defense. "We apply pressure on defense which creates turnovers and allows us to run on offense," he explained. "When we play good, aggressive defense, we get on a roll."

To be successful in the second half, Morgan says the team needs to improve its half-court offense and reduce its own turnovers, especially unforced errors. "We like to run, but we get sluggish sometimes in our half-court sets," said Morgan. "We need to polish that area of our offense and make sure we take care of the ball."

Looking at his team's second half chances, Morgan makes another prediction. "We expect a lot more close games and hopefully we can turn a couple of the around from the first half," he said. "It looks like it will probably come down to the last game of the season."
