DISTRICT COURT BRIEFS

Trucksville man charged with harassment, resisting arrest

Trucksville resident Donald Cool, 26, was arrested March 23 by Kingston Township patrolman Franklin M. Buckler after police were called to a domestic dispute at Meadowcrest Manor Apart-

Cool's girlfriend told police that C'ool had struck her and smashed out the window of a car in front of the apartment. She told police that she refused to give Cool the keys to the car and he became extremely angry and smashed the car window, threatened to kill himself by cutting his wrists, grabbed her by the neck and choked his

Police found Cool in the living room of the apartment being very loud and belligerent. He told police that since he was on his property and the car belongs to him, they could not do anything about

The defendant was determined drunk and disorderly by police and placed under arrest. Cool resisted arrest by attempting to strike Buckler while pushing and shoving. After he was placed in the patrol car, Cool started to bang his head on the left back side of the passenger window while yelling and screaming.

Buckler observed blood coming from Cool's fingers and dispatched an ambulance. Cool refused to be treated by the ambulance at the police station.

While waiting for a call from his probation officer, Cool said he was having trouble breathing. This time he accepted treatment from the ambulance and was taken to Wilkes-Barre General Hospital for medical clearance before being taken to the county prison.

On the way to the hospital, Kingston Twp. patrolman James Ibbotson rode with the defendant in the ambulance. According to police reports, Cool repeatedly threatened to "get" Ibbotson after he got out of prison. He also threatened to shoot Buckler and Cool waived his right to a preliminary trial before District Justice James Tupper on April 8. He was charged with resisting arrest. two counts of harrassment and four counts of disorderly conduct.

Related charges of terroristic threats, public drunkenness and simple assault were dismissed.

Dorrance Chapter to meet April 26 & 27

The Frances Dorrance Chapter will host a Statewide Annual Meeting of the Society for Pennsylvania Archaeology. It will be at the Best Western East Mountain Inn in Wilkes-Barre on April 26 and 27.

The Society's main goal is to spread the word that our archaeological resources provide a window to the past which can be lost forever if not handled responsibly. This educational goal is the reason the Frances Dorrance Center is opening the all day Saturday and Sunday morning seminars to the general public for a nominal fee with no advance registration required to attend the sessions.

A separate room of displays in local history and pre-history will be open to the public at no cost. Books may be purchased.

College, Middle School team to build competence

By KYLIE SHAFFERKOETTER Post Staff

DALLAS - The middle school years can be tough. Concentration on school work can become diluted with insecurities and the ever present social aspect that tends to have so much bearing during this time in life.

College Misericordia students have decided to help. With the Dallas Schools Project, college volunteers tutor middle school children to help students gain confidence through mastery of their schoolwork.

"It's been very successful," said an enthusiastic Anthony Martinelli, Dallas Middle School orincipal. "The parents have been very enthused. I see positive results from it.

The project initially was to help middle school girls through this often-difficult time in their lives. By the time girls get into middle school their self-concept is negatively affected," said Dr. Joe Rogan in radiography and certificate in of College Misericordia in Decemultrasound. > Misericordia volunteers hold tutorial sessions at the college library or other common areas on campus and discuss a variety of subject matters. "It is an excellent program because many require some tutoring and this is a way for parents to obtain free tutoring for their child. Tutoring can get very expensive," said Raelene Olszewski, Dallas Middle guidance counselor, who believes it is good to have the younger kids exposed to college students.

sponsive. Once they begin to trust the volunteers, they begin to ask more questions and learn," he explained. Rogan said the college volunteers have observed that in many cases the students only need someone to point out their minor mistakes, they go on to solve larger problems. "For example, students with math difficulties. Our students figure out they are doing a lot of little things wrong and it helps them," said Rogan.

Although parents play a small part in the project, Rogan has received phone calls from parents indicating their happiness. Olszewski said the middle school will send a survey to parents to determine their opinions of the
