

POST PHOTO/IRON BARTIZEK

Dallas Township police officers walked to the home at 185 Meadow Drive where the lifeless body of Carrie Evans, 21, was found Monday morning. The county coroner's office said the woman had been dead several hours before her body was found by a neighbor.

Death

Jolley said Carrie Evans had lived in the Back Mountain "off and on" in recent years. He believed she was originally from the Plains area.

As the neighbors, a mix of retirees and young people, came out of their homes, township police chief Carl Miers and two of his officers wrapped the trailer in the yellow tape that signifies a crime scene. Police would say little about the incident, only that the young woman was dead inside and they were waiting for other investigators to arrive at the scene. One woman was heard screaming "Oh, no," and others shook their heads in disbelief.

One neighbor had gone to Evans's husband's work site to tell him the news, but he returned to the neatly kept neighborhood shortly after noon saying Evans had gone to lunch. He was located later in the day and interviewed by police.

Hudock said results from the tests that will be done on tissue from Evans's body will be available in about a month.

DISTRICT COURT BRIEFS

Stopped by police, man claims he's an M.D., but he's just 'Doc'

West Pittston resident Guy Fasciana, 46, was arrested June 17 by Dallas Borough patrolman Michael Prokopchak after he was observed driving erratically on Rt. 415.

A call to Back Mountain Communications Center found Fasciana's driver's license was suspended. Fasciana told police that it was not suspended and that this had happened to him once before.

Police told him he could not drive his car home because of the status of his license. Fasciana became belligerent and argued with the officers, according to police reports.

Fasciana told police he was a doctor. Police called Geisinger Hospital and spoke with a doctor who said he would talk to Dr. Fasciana and get back to the police. When the doctor called back, he told police that Dr. Fasciana said he was not in Dallas June 17 and that his son, Guy Fasciana, had his car that night. Dr. Fasciana said his son was not a doctor, but was called "Doc" because he owned Doc's Sports Bar.

Fasciana was charged with false reporting to law enforcement, passing when prohibited, exceeding the maximum speed and disorderly conduct. A related charge of driving with a suspended license was dismissed.

DRIVING WITHOUT VALID LICENSE CHARGED

Dallas resident Joseph Jacob Kretchmer, 61, was arrested May 27 by Dallas Borough patrolman James Drury after police observed his inspection sticker expired Oct. 1995. A black marker was used on the sticker to make it appear to read Oct. 1997.

He was charged with operating without valid inspection. A related charge of fraud with an inspection was dismissed.

D.U.I. CHARGES

- Richford, NY, resident David

Earl Everidge, 38, was arrested Sept. 17 by Dallas Township patrolman Wayman Miers after police observed him driving erratically on Rt. 309. After failing field sobriety tests, Everidge refused to submit to an alcohol blood level test. Refusal of the test results in a one year suspension of a driver's license.

He was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol and disorderly conduct.

Ashley resident Michael Carver, 26, was arrested July 26 by Kingston Township patrolman James Ibbotson after police observed him driving erratically on Rt. 309. After failing field sobriety tests, Carver was taken to Wilkes-Barre General Hospital where his blood alcohol level was determined to be .208.

Dallas resident William A. Geurin Jr., 30, who was arrested June 5 after Dallas Township patrolman Doug Higgins saw his vehicle weave between lanes on Rt. 309, Upper Demunds Rd., and Campground Rd.

After failing field sobriety tests, Geurin Jr. was transported to the Dallas Township Police Station for a breath test. He refused to take the breath test which results in a one year suspension of his driver's license.

He was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, exceeding the speed limit and driving an unregistered vehicle.

Wilkes-Barre resident Mary Wright, 48, who was arrested by Dallas Township patrolman Wayman Miers after police were called to help Wright because her car was stuck in the yard of a Fern St. residence.

After failing field sobriety tests, Wright was transported to Luzerne County Central Processing Center where she refused to submit to a breath test.

She was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol and driving without a license.

Honesdale resident Brent Moyer, 38, who was arrested Sept. 12 after Kingston Township patrolman Charles Rauschkolb was told by a passing motorist that Moyer was driving drunk. Police observed Moyer driving erratically.

After failing field sobriety tests, Moyer was taken to the Dallas Township Police Station where his blood alcohol level was determined to be .111.

He was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol and careless driving.
