In one recent victory, all four players scored in double figures as they celebrated "Senior Night." "That performance was typical of our season," said Morgan. "This group has given us outstanding senior leadership."

Spencer, the team's point guard and leading scorer, has started every game for four years and is the seventh player in school history to score 1,000-points.

Wolfe, a three-year starter at forward, is the team's top rebounder. Together, they make Morgan's job much easier. "They have a great deal of experience and are familiar with the system," said Morgan. "They know what we want to do. It's like having two coaches on the court."

Michaels, a guard, and Kehler, a center, along with junior forward Faith O'Dell round out the starting five. "This a great bunch of kids," said Morgan. "They do whatever we ask of them and are a lot of fun to coach."

Junior Jen Johnstone provides depth and is one the team's toughest defenders while sophomore Melissa DeCesaris can play point guard and forward.

"Jen is our utility player," explained Morgan. "We use her everywhere. She is tenacious on defense. Melissa can play inside and can also run the point to take some of the pressure off Kelly."

Sophomore Jen Frank has also provided steady play at guard.

According to Morgan, the Knights' pressure defense has been the key to their success. "Mike Sharok (assistant coach) has done a tremendous job with our presses," said Morgan. "That

The Knights hope to continue to play stingy defense as they
