So close

Robert Weaver, center, and Preston Hoyt won a contest at Lake-Lehman High School, using the scientific method. The closest guess to the number of jelly beans in the jar would win. Weaver and Hoyt calculated the volume each bean would occupy, then projected that figure to the size of the jar. Their estimate — 3,232 — was only three beans away from the actual total of 3,235. Looking on is Gail Meeker, a teacher. Joann White won second place and Mr. Yurko took third.

Sem 4th graders qualify for Carnegie-Mellon talent search

Thirteen fourth-grade students at Wyoming Seminary Lower School have qualified for the Carnegie Mellon University Institute for Talented Elementary Students (C-MITES) Talent Search.

Carnegie Mellon's Talent Search identifies young students who are talented in mathematics, science, or verbal reasoning. C-MITES provides a variety of summer and weekend programs for identified students.

Students who scored at the 95th percentile or above on the Vocabulary, Math Total or Science subtest of a grade-level standardized test such as the Iowa Tests of Basic Skills or the Stanford Achievement Test are recommended for the Talent Search.

Wyoming Seminary is the testing center for the C-MITES program in northeastern Pennsylvania, and will be offering two C-MITES courses for gifted students this summer at its Lower School in Forty Fort.
