dangerous icy situation.

Council president William Roberts told Tkatch, "Storm water management is a major concern of the council. We will look into it. It won't be sloughed off. There are other projects on the table, but we will look into it."

When Tkatch asked if there was anything residents could do to help council, Roberts said, "If you see anything, call and the road crew can look at it and trace it to its source." Tkatch thanked council for their ongoing service to residents. "We truly appreciate as residents the service the borough gives us," she said.

Residents of Joseph Street were not the only ones with road troubles. Doug Martin, who is about to purchase a house on Chelsea Drive, addressed council regarding the name of the street. Martin explained that there are discrepancies between maps and the post office concerning the street, which is sometimes called Highland Boulevard.

"We discussed the situation at the work session Monday evening," said Theodore Krohn, solicitor for the borough. "The name doesn't make any difference to council. It was not dedicated to the borough or taken over by the borough so we have nothing to do with maintaining it."

Jim Wisniewski, who developed the property, attended the meeting with Martin. Wisniewski told council that he believed that Highland Boulevard was accepted by council in the 1960's. Chelsea Drive is a continuation of Highland Boulevard. Wisniewski asked Krohn how much of the road was actually accepted.

"We're going to have to get together with Mr. Krohn and find out if it was dedicated and if not, find out how to dedicate it," Roberts explained to both Martin and Wisniewski. "If you want the road accepted, you need to go through the proper procedure. The name of the street has to be taken up with the post office."

Also during the meeting:

- Council voted to award a bid for storm water drainage work on Foster Street to American Asphalt.

- Council made a motion to authorize borough manager Milton Lutsey to begin collecting information on a new police cruiser. The new cruiser will replace a worn-out cruiser.

- Council member Jay Pope said the county 911 system will begin dispatching on June 17. The Back Mountain Communication Center will stay open for 30 days after the 911 dispatch system begins working in case of any glitches in the system.

- The borough intends to look into a voice mail system for non-emergency borough police calls.
