Nick Andrusian came prepared with a slogan for the race, which was changed to eliminate the swim after pollution from duck and goose droppings was found in Harveys Lake.

Sue Hand painted the scene, and made a sale on the spot to Dave Mariner, who vowed to pay whatever she asked for the work.

Kevin Augustine cooled off in the temporary pool set up for competitors. He was the top Back Mountain finisher at 2:00:47, good for 4th out of 28 racers in the male age 40-44 category.

Eric and Tiff Schall were among the army of local volunteers who worked to put on the race, which attracted a large contingent of professionals.
