Ticks

check the back of your head and scalp for ticks. This may be an uncomfortable experience for some people, perhaps as uncomfortable as the tick itself, but for the health risks involved it's a small price to pay. On more than one occasion either my hunting partner or myself have done this. This is one time that pride or embarrassment should not get in the way of safety.

REMOVING A TICK

If you have found a tick on you and have already attached himself to you, DO NOT CRUSH IT. If you crush this nasty little bug you may release the bacteria in its body and infect yourself. Grab the tick around the head with a pair of tweezers and pull away. Immediately wash the bite area with soap and water and then a disinfectant such as hydrogen peroxide or isopropyl alcohol.

TIPS FOR WARDING OFF DEER TICKS

1. Wear an insect repellent that contains DEET. (Only on clothing, or an allergic reaction could occur.)
2. Tuck pant legs inside boots while afield.
3. Avoid putting harvested game inside the travelling area of a vehicle. On vehicles such as Blazers and Jeeps, game carrier racks that can be attached to a hitch are a good idea.
4. Inspect hunting dogs after every trip afield, especially if you keep him indoors.
5. Avoid known areas of high infestation when possible.
