McGowan scholarship awarded to Jared Dukas

Dr. Edward Schoen, dean of The William G. McGowan School of Business at King's College, has announced that Jared C. Dukas, Dallas, is one of two recipients of the William G. McGowan Scholarships for 1999.

The scholarship is a full-tuition award which is given to full-time students pursuing their primary major with the McGowan School of Business and who are entering their senior year at King's College. Students must have at least a 3.0 G.P.A. and must submit a 500 to 1,000 word essay on the contributions of William G. McGowan to today's business world in general, or the telecommunications field in particular. All students must be nominated by at least one faculty member of the business school.

Dukas is a double major in accounting and English who has attained a cumulative GPA of 3.78. Dukas was recently elected president of Sigma Tau Delta, the English honors society and vice president of Delta Epsilon Sigma, the national honor society of Catholic colleges and universities. He has focused his co-curricular activities on The Crown, King's student newspaper, as a writer, then features editor, and the managing editor. In the process he has honed his leadership and management skills and abilities. The selection committee was particularly impressed with Jared's ability not only to integrate his liberal arts background into his business studies, but to articulate how his success in academic work and extracurricular activities will prove beneficial to his business career.
