funds to pursue a hollow victory in court. "If this was untouched agricultural land I'd be up there stopping it with my body if necessary," he said, but at this point he hopes a settlement with conditions will eventually be wrung out.

The township pursued the matter vigorously for the first 10 years, Niezgoda said, then it lay dormant for another 10 years. During that time, documents relating to the case were lost from the Luzerne County Courthouse, and he isn't sure the township could now produce sufficient documentation to win.

The lack of documents has already hurt. A state mediator cited the missing information when he recently recused himself from the case. "The courts have put it back in our lap and said, 'Solve this,'" Niezgoda said.

Both Ray and Niezgoda say conditions must be placed on any settlement to minimize the impact of mining on owners of adjoining property. "The conditions are the devil in the details," Niezgoda said. The planning commission has considered specific conditions, but also wants them negotiated between the parties. "I think conditions can be worked out," he said.

Ray Peeler is one neighboring property owner who feels the mining zone can be established if adequate conditions are attached. He is planning the Rolling Meadows subdivision of 47 homes on 52 acres of land near American Asphalt, with frontage between the existing Fieldcrest development and the five corners at Huntsville dam.

One concern Peeler and other neighboring property owners have is the noise and concussion from blasting, and one of the conditions may be restrictions on the timing and size of explosions.

The Nov. 30 public hearing will be a forum for residents to speak out about the issue, and to suggest conditions that might be applied to a settlement.

Honoring those who served

In photo at left, Marion Kunigonis stood behind a new monument placed in front of the Legion hall. The granite memorial was sponsored by the Daddow-Isaacs Post 672 American Legion, the Legion Auxiliary, the Sons of the Legion and the Home Association. Kunigonis is president of the Auxiliary and the hospital representative to the VA Hospital in Wilkes-Barre.

increase in salary equivalent to 21.9 percent of his annual salary. The large boost is a reflection of his change of status from Assistant Principal to Principal/Director of Curriculum.

The salary increase for Dr. William Price, Lake-Lehman Superintendent, was slightly lower than the 3.1 percent increase most Lehman administrators received. This school year's salary is $2,000, or 2.51 percent, higher than Price's 1998-1999 salary.

Correction

A photo published in last week's issue was misidentified. In a photo package about the Girl Scouts Father/Daughter dance, then names Paul and Kelsey Denmon were placed with one photo. The correct identification is Ray and Darlene Rybka. We apologize for the error.
