Loefflad wins DMS geography bee

Eric Loefflad, a seventh grade student at the Dallas Middle School, recently won the school-level competition of the National Geography Bee and a chance at a college scholarship. The bee is sponsored by the National Geographic Society.

The first round for this years contest included thousands of schools from around the United States and U.S. Territories. The school winners will now take a written test: up to 100 of the top scorers in each state and territory will be eligible to compete in the state bee this spring.

The National Geographic Society will provide and all-expense paid trip to Washington, D.C., for the state champions to participate in the national championship on May 23 and 24.

The first-place winner will receive a $25,000 college scholarship.

Penn State Wilkes-Barre to feature webmaster program

Penn State Wilkes-Barre will feature the University's new Webmaster Certificate during an open house scheduled at the campus Wednesday, Feb. 23 from 5 to 7 p.m. Courses for the Webmaster Certificate are being offered regionally through the Continuing Education Departments at Penn State Wilkes-Barre, Worthington Scranton and Hazleton.

Courses are available in sequence based on prerequisites and it is strongly suggested that participants enroll in and complete the entire certificate program. However, individuals may elect to take specific courses on a space available basis. Tuition reimbursement by employers is also an option for students enrolled in the Webmaster program.

The World Organization of Webmasters and the Association of Internet Professionals (AIP) approve the Penn State Webmaster Certificate, which is offered through the University's College of Engineering. It is one of only a few webmaster programs approved by AIP. Some of the courses are HTML levels 1 and 2, Visual and Graphic Design, Legal and Ethical Issues, Emerging Technology, Publishing Internet Documents, JavaScripting, Multimedia on the Web, Network and Server Administration, Security Issues and Basics, Conducting Business on the Internet, Front Page and PhotoShop.

"The Webmaster Certificate program, which is a direct response to the needs of regional businesses, is one of our most successful new offerings," said Ina Lubin, Penn State Wilkes-Barre director of continuing education. "With a growing demand for web page administrators or webmasters, this program is designed to teach the essentials of web communications," she explains.

Open House participants will learn more about the program, review course curriculum, and tour the computer labs. Please call 675-9102 or e-mail jqr8@psu.edu for open house reservations or more information.
