Two Sem students chosen to attend Governor's Schools

Two Wyoming Seminary juniors from the Back Mountain will be attending the Governor's School of Excellence this summer. Phillip Oh of Dallas and Neil "Buddy" Shah of Shavertown, were named to the statewide program based on their interest in the program's specific issues, their academic achievement and their leadership potential.

The five-week residential programs for high school students from throughout the Commonwealth take place on college and university campuses; the schools provide hands-on experiences for students in the agricultural sciences, the arts, health care, international studies, the sciences and teaching.

Shah, the son of Naresh and Mrudula Shah, will attend the Governor's School for the Sciences at Carnegie Mellon University. They will concentrate on various areas of chemistry, physics, biology, mathematics and computer science and will participate in specialized electives and laboratory research projects.

Oh, son of Dong and Sue Oh, will attend the Governor's School for Information Technology, which is jointly hosted by Drexel University and Penn State University, College Park. The School for Technology offers students various courses covering networking and telecommunications, system analysis and design, e-commerce, software development and computer programming.

Two Wyoming Seminary students from the Back Mountain were chosen as alternates for programs, and will be admitted if other students decline their offers. They are: Leslie Dewees of Dallas, to the School for the Arts, and Philip Oh of Dallas, to the School for Health Care.

DHS Grad 2000 ice cream fundraiser

The DHS Grad 2000 committee has once again teamed up with Mama and Papa's Ice Cream Parlor for their final fundraiser. Through Friday, June 9, coupons can be redeemed at the shop, with a portion of the proceeds going to all-night alcohol-free, drug-free lock-in being planned for the graduating seniors of Dallas High School. Mama and Papa's Ice Cream Parlor is located in the Country Club Shopping Center on Upper Demunds Road in Dallas, and is open from 1-10 p.m. daily. Coupons can be obtained by calling the high school guidance office.
