give players for lapses, said Rich Gorgone, Lake-Lehman football coach. He said during this year's donkey basketball game, in which faculty plays against students, a Lake-Lehman graduate who is now a teacher kept missing shots. "I need Bearde to yell at me," Gorgone heard him shout.

"His personality and work ethic showed in the athletic program," Gorgone said, although it was always kept in proper perspective. He said Bearde helped establish a "gentlemen's agreement" that coaches would not meddle if students were playing another sport.

Oliver said Bearde was first hired to teach reading at the elementary level and assist with athletic programs. He also managed the school's audio/visual equipment. Bearde had been working to develop middle school students' basic skills during the last school term.

Bearde had a distinguished playing and coaching career. After an all-star high school career

"We lost a very good and decent man. He truly was a credit to his profession, the school district and his family."

in baseball, football and basketball, he was signed to a bonus contract by the Pittsburgh Pirates. He graduated from West Chester University, then coached at two high schools and Wilkes College before coming to Lake-Lehman, where his teams made nine playoff appearances and won two conference championships. He was active in high school athletic organizations and served as secretary/treasurer of the Wyoming Valley Conference.
