Local artists at Windsor Park

Popular local artist Sue Hand held classes recently at the outdoor set of the PBS Television series "Windsor Park Stories" in Dallas.

Hand, who owns an art studio on Main Street in Dallas, was the subject of an hour-long "Windsor Park Stories" which aired on WVIA Channel 44 on April 23. The class met for one week at Windsor Park drawing and painting the flowers and trees. In the beginning of the week the class began with exercises Hand calls "sketch catches," wherein her students detail the leaves and buds of flowers, and by the end of the week the students were able to sketch the expanse of the garden.

Windsor Park was transformed from an empty lot four years ago into a vibrant perennial garden by the shows producers. Dr. Tony and Kitch Loftus-Mussari. Wanting to develop a television program that highlights regular people who have accomplished extraordinary things, the Mussaris decided to set their television show in the garden they created.

Fall production of the new season of "Windsor Park Stories" will begin in the Park in late July. "Windsor Park Stories" can be seen Sunday evenings at 7 p.m. on WVIA-TV.
