whose goal is to make decent shelter a matter of conscience and action. Tax deductible donations of money, materials and volunteer labor allow Habitat to build and rehabilitate homes with the help of the future homeowners.

"We have a strong link with the Back Mountain community," said Morag Michael who is the Church Relations chairperson for the local Habitat chapter. "We held a building marathon in September at a two-family residence on Madison Street in Wilkes-Barre and we had a wonderful turnout from the Back Mountain. Volunteers from Shavertown UMC, Trucksville UMC and Trinity Presbyterian Church all helped in a variety of ways. Also, a group of students from College Misericordia became involved at that time and continue to work on these homes."

Habitat is close to completing a home in Nanticoke for the Herbert family. "The three churches I already mentioned had a combined Vacation Church School this summer and their focus was Habitat for Humanity. Bonnie Ziegler, Education Director at Shavertown UMC, had the wonderful idea to have the children make three quilts during that camp. These quilts are for the three Herbert children and will be on display at the concert," said Mrs. Michael. "We'll also have some things like cookbooks and children's t-shirts available for purchase."

The concert will take place at

Rev. Charles Naugle, right, of Trucksville United Methodist Church, and Ed Cole put hammers to nail at a recent "building marathon."

Habitat for Humanity volunteers from Trinity Presbyterian Church put up one wall of a home in Wilkes-Barre Shavertown United Methodist Church on Friday, Dec. 8, starting at 8 p.m. The church, which is handicapped accessible, is located at 165 North Pioneer Ave.

The four singers and their accompanist will perform some of their favorite numbers and then A Touch of Brass will perform.

"Then we'll do a few songs together," said Rev. Clark who has been in the group for 11 years. "We'll also have a chance for the audience to join us in some carols." They promise an evening of humorous and seasonal musical entertainment for the entire family.
