

DMS Science Club learns to compost

The Dallas Middle School Science Club participated in a composting workshop in early November. The workshop was offered as a part of a joint effort between the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection and the Penn State Cooperative Extension to increase the amount of waste that is recycled. The Science Club is helping to reach the state's goal of 35% waste recycling by maintaining on-site compost bin and an aluminum can recycling program. Speakers for the workshop were Donna Grey, of then Luzerne County Cooperative Extension, and Master Gardener Ruth Walsh. Shown in the photo are several members of the Dallas Middle School Science club.
