A geothermal heating and cooling system uses the consistent temperature of the earth to provide heating, cooling, and hot water. Water is circulated through polyethylene pipes called loops, which are installed below the earth's surface. The loops will be connected to a heat pump in each classroom.

The addition of a natatorium is also part of the project. Griffiths said the swimming pool was originally planned for the building in 1968. The 300,000 gallon pool will have six lanes and there will be seating for 400 spectators.

Currently the third and ninth grades use the swimming pool at College Misericordia. Griffiths said the swimming pool at the middle school will allow the seventh grade to be added to the swim schedule.

A secured vestibule will bring added security to the building. Guests will only have access to the administrative waiting room prior to check in.
