ing chosen. He doesn't know how music will fit into his schedule next year at Bucknell University, as a chemical engineering major. Kevin said he is going to try to keep playing.

Second quarter creative student is Amy Koshinski, a senior, and fourth quarter is Brian Carlson, also a senior.

The School Spirit Award for December through February goes to the student who promotes and/or participates in activities which unify the student body. Senior Joshua Katyl received the award for holding the high school soccer team together during a difficult season.

Joshua said the team lost a lot of players this season. "I tried to encourage the guys to stay together and work hard for the guys missing," he said.

As Joshua prepares to attend the University of Pittsburgh to major in computer science in the fall, his word of advice to next year's soccer team is team unity. "Work together, work hard and everyone should be on the same page," he said.

Other recipients for the School Spirit Award were senior Jennifer Gross, first quarter, and junior John Pambianco, third quarter.

Sophomore Emily Nagy is the Citizen Student for March through May. The Citizen Student Award is presented to the student who participates in community service projects either in or out of school and/or is involved in "random acts of kindness."

Last summer, Emily volunteered countless hours at the Meadows Personal Care Facilities. She volunteered after seeing an ad in the paper looking for volunteers for the Meadows. "I talk with people, play bingo or take them to church," Emily said.

During the school year, Emily would volunteer whenever she could. "I like seeing the people, and I like to make them smile and laugh," she said.

Other Citizen Student Award recipients were junior Shane Shrader, first quarter, and senior Luke Miller, second quarter.

The Student Achiever Award is presented to a student who demonstrates exceptional performance of a task and achieves his or her personal best. For the first quarter Timothy Faneck, senior, received the award. Second quarter recipient was Brad Lothridge, junior, and third quarter was Jacob Burke.

The Parent, Teacher, Student Organization (PTSO) along with local businesses sponsors the program. This year's sponsors included Rep. Phyllis Mundy, Pikes Creek Park, Pace Physical Therapy, Valley Open MRI and Diagnostic Center, Dallas High School Mountaineer Newspaper Club, and Dallas Education Association.
