Nathan Detroit (played by Craig Thomas) is searching for a location where he can run his floating crap game, but his sidekicks, Benny Southstreet (Greg Piazza), and Arvide (Matt Morris), while devoted, are more destructive than helpful.

It's the 14th anniversary of their long engagement and this doll, Adelaide (played by Sheryl Fishel) is ready for marriage, but guys like Nathan Detroit (Craig Thomas) just don't do the family thing.

"I'll have the $1000 tomorrow!" Nathan Detroit (Craig Thomas) pleads with Joey Biltmore to let him use the garage tonight for his crap game.

Guys and Dolls

ing soon) but remembers to smile as he yells, "Aaron, the lights! Blackout! Blackout!" and hauls the yellow set panels across the stage. Gail Meeker, the other faculty director, is having too much fun, sitting in the front row, clipboard in hand, giggling loudly as the players carry off their one-liners with aplomb. Beside her, student director, Laura O, jumps into the air and pumps her arms above her head as a dancing and singing scene with the "Guys" comes off well after the third walk-through.

But it will all be smooth and seamless by this weekend. You'll laugh hysterically as gambler Nathan Detroit scurries to hide his floating crap game from the coppers and his nightclub singing, 14-year fiance, Adelaide. You'll feel the week's tension slip from your body and mind as you gaze upon fabulous scenes of

New York City and Havana, circa 1950, listen to the old familiar show tunes — remember "Luck Be A Lady Tonight?" — and long for the slick Sky Masterson to win his bet with Nathan and win over good and pious Sarah of the Save-a-Soul mission.

Go see "Guys and Dolls" this Friday and Saturday at 7:30 p.m. or Sunday at 3 p.m. at the Lake-Lehman High School auditorium. Admission is only $6 for adults and $4 for students. Take the kids too. For reserved seating, call 675-7458 ext. 67 between 8:15 and 10:30 a.m. or buy your tickets at the door. You'll be smiling when you leave.
