

Sculpture by son honors Dr. Rumbaugh

Dr. Marshall U. Rumbaugh, Dallas, was recently honored with the dedication of a statue of Thomas Merton. The wood sculpture was carved by the doctor's son, artist Marshall D. Rumbaugh, and presented to King's College by Gail O'Brien, daughter of Dr. Rumbaugh. It will stand at the entrance of the Widmann Art Gallery in the Sheehy-Farmer Campus Center.

"I wanted to have a piece of an important local artist's work that is representative of the spirit of both the school and the artist," O'Brien said. "I'm dedicating it in honor of our father."

Wagner will present research at Student Chemists Convention

Trustee Scholar Stacey Wagner of Shavertown, a Lafayette junior, will present her research at the Intercollegiate Student Chemists Convention April 20 at Lebanon Valley College in Annville, Pa. She will be giving a talk on protein isolation and stabilization, a topic she investigated in an intensive research project.

Selected from among Lafayette's top applicants, Trustee Scholars have distinguished themselves through exceptional academic achievement in high school. They receive from Lafayette an annual minimum scholarship of $7,500 (totaling $30,000 over four years) or a grant in the full amount of their demonstrated need if the need is more than $7,500.

Wagner, a biochemistry major, conducted the research as a participant in Lafayette's EXCEL Scholars program. In EXCEL, students assist faculty members with research while earning a stipend.

During the 2002 interim session between regular semesters, she worked with Yvonne Gindt, assistant professor of chemistry, on a project called "Isolation of DNA Photolyase and Investigation of Its Tertiary Structure Stability Spectroscopy."

A graduate of Dallas High School, Wagner is a resident advisor, vice president of College Republicans, and a member of Lafayette's ski racing team. She is also a member of Lafayette's Alternative School Break Club, which sponsors service projects over the winter and spring breaks, and will travel with a team to a location just outside Budapest, Hungary, to work with a Habitat for Humanity affiliate on home construction for low-income families over spring break 2002. She is the daughter of Dennis and Carol Wagner of Village Drive, Shavertown.
