prices," said Getz. "But our main concern was what to get. Somehow we all had faith that the money would be there. The Board of Trustees signed off on the project, we did a mailing to the congregation, and some very charitable people came up with some very nice gifts. We raised the pledges in just five weeks because we believed it was the reasonable and right thing to do to restore the beauty of music to our worship service."

Music augments the other facets of worship services, said Pastor Jan Clark. "The organ is a mighty instrument of worship," she said. "It lifts us up beyond where we are. It helps us celebrate our greatest joys and gives us strength in our times of deepest sorrow."

The new organ arrived Thanksgiving week last year, but the church members wanted to wait until spring and the promise of good weather to invite the public to listen to the wonderful sounds of their new Rodgers Trillium 957 organ.

"As the organist of such a beautiful instrument, I feel like I've died and gone to heaven," said Kelleher. "There are more than 100 sounds on the main organ and more than 300 on an added midi-box. It sounds like a pipe organ, but is much more versatile. The extra sounds include hand bells, xylophones, marimbas, drums, endless brass, flutes and more. It's been a Godsend for our youth because we can provide music for all kinds of worship including contemporary and African style music."

The church will host a community hymn sing Friday, May 3 at 7 p.m., featuring the organ, choirs, endless brass, hand bells, flute and more.

They will conduct a workshop for area organists entitled, "New Music for Today's Organist Saturday," May 4 from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Guest recitalist and internationally renowned organist Dan Miller will lead the workshop.

An Organ Dedication Recital featuring Miller will be held Sunday, May 5 at 4 p.m. A reception will follow.

Miller has been a featured recitalist at the Crystal Cathedral in California, the Charlotte Symphony Orchestra, the Charlotte Philharmonic Orchestra, the Florida Philharmonic and the King's Brass.

The three days of activities will be held in the sanctuary. They are open to the public and are free of charge.
