Best Bets: The Bears, Eagles and Patriots had some of the most success, and seem to be on track this year to do the same. They are loaded with a mix of youth and experience, and should provide a plethora of points each week. As far as kickers are concerned, no one has been as consistent as Denver's Jason Elam over the past couple of years. He has a strong foot, and will help considerably in leagues where distance is as important as amount of field goals and extra points.

4. Beware of one week wonders. It seems that every year, someone in leagues I've played in tries to climb out of the cellar with one week wonders, or players who shine one week, and then disappear into the turf for the rest of the season. For some players, all it takes is that one week to get their big break, but one week is not enough time to gauge a fantasy player's importance. Most leagues don't allow many bench players, so the risk of losing someone important on a gamble is not a wise choice.

Best Bet: Try and hold out on picking up players until they have at least two weeks to prove they deserve to be on your roster.

5. Evaluate your competition's trade bait. Unlike the NFL, many FFL players dangle players out as trade bait because there is something wrong with the player, or they don't want to give up to get. Make sure what you're getting is comparable to what you're giving up. There sure are some dirty players out there, and a bad trade could mean the difference between first-place and somewhere in the middle. Read up on players before making the trade.

These are only a few tips to get you started in a fantasy football league, and you'll probably find an equation that works better for you as you go. Just remember, these leagues are meant to have fun, but many like the competition and want to win at all costs.

Lake-Lehman fields off limits

The Lake-Lehman School District wishes to inform district residents and community groups that due to construction, all Lake-Lehman fields at the Senior High school will not be available for use from June 8, thru August 31.

Also, Senior High School offices will be transferred to the Middle Level Building as of June 8.

Any resident needing information from the Senior High School Office, Guidance or Special Education Offices should visit the Middle Level Building from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Monday-Friday.

Hoover awarded scholarship at Gettysburg

During Commencement Ceremonies May 19 at Gettysburg College, Dallas resident Justin Hoover was announced as the male recipient of the Senior Scholarship. This scholarship is awarded to the two rising seniors, one female and one male, that best exemplify the student body at Gettysburg College. It was created by the class of 1996 and Robert E. Stockberger '33. Recipients are nominated by any member of the college community and selected by a committee consisting of faculty, administrators and current seniors. The scholarship is based on academic achievement, outstanding leadership, extracurricular involvement and extensive service to the campus and the community.

Justin is the son of Russ and Dee Dee Hoover, and is a 1999 graduate of Dallas Senior High School.
