

Money raised for the Meadows

The Meadows Nursing Center and The Meadows Manor, Dallas, recently held an evening social to honor those who donated to the annual "Rev. Dr. Jule Ayers-Friends of EEI" fund raising campaign. Monsignor Donald A. McAndrews, co-founder and President of the EEI Board of Directors, announced the proceeds helped increase the Meadows Manor endowment fund and purchase special equipment for residents at the nursing center.

Ecumenical Enterprises, Inc. (EEI), is an ecumenically sponsored private and non-profit corporation that owns and operates ten housing facilities and a day care center.

Deer management workshop for landowners

"Deer Biology and Management: Problems & Solutions," a workshop for landowners, professional resource managers and others affected by white-tailed deer, is being offered at Penn State Wilkes-Barre on Friday, November 4 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The program is being offered in partnership with Audubon Pennsylvania.

"Deer are a familiar sight in Northeastern Pennsylvania. We appreciate their beauty, but they can sometimes be a nuisance to property owners, golf course managers, farmers, gardeners, motorists and others," says Janet Rosenbaum, assistant director of continuing education. "This workshop will give participants an understanding of deer ecology and behavior, the history of deer management, deer problems and their resolution, and the methods of monitoring deer impact."

Participants will get an overview of subjects that will assist them with efforts to address deer management on their land while making them aware of current and upcoming management tools and approaches. Workshop leaders will include Bryon P. Shissler, a certified wildlife biologist who has been involved with deer management and forest ecology for more than two decades, and Kathy Randall, the conservation program coordinator for Audubon Pennsylvania.

The workshop is an outreach program of Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, School of Forest Resources, and the Outreach Office of Statewide Programs. Fee for the workshop is $35. For detailed information or to register, call the Penn State Wilkes-Barre Office of Continuing Education at 675-9102.

Blood inventory exceptionally low

American Red Cross Blood Services, Northeastern Pennsylvania Region (NEPA), was forced to put out special calls to area media outlets last week to find blood donors for a critically injured accident victim.

"The patient spent most of Friday in the operating room of a Scranton hospital," said Red Cross spokesperson Molly Groody. "During that surgery she used all of the A-negative blood the hospital had on hand. We received a call for more blood for this patient and sent the hospital almost all of the A-negative blood in our inventory."

The 29-year-old patient thus far has used 19 units of A-negative red cells, and five units of plasma. She was in surgery again Monday and the hospital is keeping units on hand for more transfusions.

"We have been telling the public continuously the blood supply is critically low," Groody said. "When we sent blood Friday afternoon for this patient, we had only five units of A-negative blood left on our shelves. We should have a three-day supply, which would be 150 units of this blood type. People need to give blood now and help rebuild the blood supply."

The area's blood supply problem began this summer, and has not yet rebounded. "The only solution is for people to give blood," Groody said. "People's lives are at stake."

Anyone who is at least 17 years old, who weighs at least 105 pounds, and is healthy may give blood. For more information, call the Red Cross at 1-800-GIVE LIFE, or your local American Red Cross Chapter.
