

Feet

This is the fourth year the company has sponsored the contest that brings in applicants from around the world, and the second time Reese has entered.

Reese didn't place her first time around, but she entered this year armed with professional photos and a laissez faire attitude. "Last year I knew every date, I followed the whole thing."

This year she was too busy to be tied up waiting for the results. "I was blown away when I got the phone call. I mean it's the Worlds Most Beautiful Feet, not the U.S., not Pennsylvania."

"Of course people think it's wonderful, but their first reaction sometimes is to laugh."

Tracey Reese of Shavertown is one of 10 finalists in the World's Most Beautiful Feet contest.

Reese said she's always known her feet were special, mostly because people are prone to comment on them. Without creams, compounds or expensive pedicures, her feet look, well, like they could be the Worlds Most Beautiful. "Everybody tells me all the time. I've had people stop me in shoe stores."

Reese said she's up against stiff competition from as far away as Hawaii and from here on out, winning is not necessarily about who has the most beautiful feet. "I was told that last year the woman didn't necessarily have the nicest feet, but that she had a lot of votes."

That's because the way the contest is set up, professionals choose the finalists, then photos of the 10 finalists' feet are put on the Foot.com website and the public votes for the winner.

Reese isn't shy about her desire to win.

"I'm not afraid to ask people to vote. This is a time when it's been really good to have a lot of friends."

Local radio station 97.1 BHT invited Reese on a radio show and went so far as to put her on their website so listeners can click on and vote.

The goal of entering the contest? "I would love a career in foot modeling," said Reese. "And not to mention that eight-day, seven-night trip to the Caribbean."

How you can help Tracey win

To vote in The World's Most Beautiful Feet contest, go to Foot.com by September 17, click on the World's Most Beautiful Feet Contest icon and follow the directions.

Tell our advertisers you saw them in The Dallas Post.

They'll appreciate it, and so will we.
