ally no regrets there," Swingle said. "It's never bothered me about not going on and seeing the way things could've turned out."

Swingle eventually went on to coach teeners baseball in the Back Mountain, where he won two league titles. The former high school wrestler also established the Noxen Strikers, an elementary school wrestling program. The Strikers produced several quality wrestlers who went on to have strong high school careers with Lake-Lehman, Dallas and Tunkhan-

Swingle currently serves as assistant wrestling coach under his son, who is head coach at

Unlike Swingle, Shalata did pursue a career in professional baseball. The 1954 Lake-Noxen grad, voted outstanding athlete during his senior year, played two years of minor league ball in the St. Louis Cardinals organization. He said he led his class-C team in doubles and triples during his first year,

"It was great. There were a lot of nice guys in that league we played in," Shalata said. "I played against Gary Bell in the Cleveland farm system. I played against Willie McCovey in the Giants organization."

Shalata's professional baseball career was cut short when the Cardinals abruptly downsized the number of minor league squads in their system during the 1956 season.

Still, the former center fielder chose to continue playing the game. He returned to the area and went on to play for American Legion teams in Dallas and Swoyersville.

While baseball stood as the cornerstone in the lives of some candidates, others made a name for themselves in wrestling.

Although Sorber coached Lake-Lehman baseball teams to three consecutive Wyoming Valley Conference titles in the late 1990s, he also had a successful playing and coaching career in wrestling.

The 1966 Lake-Lehman grad followed up his nine varsity letters in high school by becoming captain of the wrestling team at Mansfield University. He returned to Lake-Lehman as a teacher in 1971 and went on to coach the school's wrestling team during the 1970s. After he retired as head coach, Sorber stayed on as a wrestling consultant until the late 1990s.

'We only had three state champions in wrestling and three all-state baseball players (at Lake-Lehman), and I was fortunate enough to work with all of them," Sorber said.

One of the players who Sorber coached at Lake-Lehman was Oliver. "He was phenomenal," Oliver said. "He was very informative. He knew every aspect of the game, and he helped me tremendously in making the jump from high school to the professional ranks. Part of my success is a tribute to him."

Much of Davis' success also came in wrestling. A 1970 Lake-Lehman grad, Davis went on to become a wrestling recruiter at Clarion University of Pennsylvania. He served as the school's head coach in wrestling during the 1990s. During his coaching tenure, his team ranked as high as third in the nation while competing against mostly Division-I schools.

One of Davis' top recruits, Kurt Angle, went on to become an eventual Olympic champion and a professional wrestler.

"I was fortunate," Davis said. "I got to coach an Olympic champion. I got to coach national champions. I got to work with good people."

The rest of the inductees are Ernie Shartle, Ed White, Gretchen Grimaud, Norm Sisle, Billy Gaylord, Ronnie Cole, Linc Welles, George Baron, Cathy Boyanowski, Ellen Mulligan, Bill Bush, and the late Grover Powell.

The induction banquet will begin at 4:30 p.m. on Saturday. It will feature hors d'oeuvres and a meal.

Tickets are $25 and can be purchased by contacting Sorber (477-2303), Dick Nasser (278-3459) or either of the event's co-chairs: Charlie Shaw (836-2049) or Karl Schnure (746-1353). Shaw said the deadline for purchasing tickets is Oct. 8.

Dallas girls win Invitational

The Dallas High School Girl's Cross Country team took first place in the 10th annual Lackawanna County Commissioners Jack McGuigan Invitational held at McDade Park in Scranton on September 27. Lisa Giacometti, Dallas, won the race in 19:23, and six other Dallas runners earned trophies for their placement. Nearly 200 runners from over 40 different schools competed in the Girl's Varsity division. Matt Samuels is the coach of the Dallas High School Cross Country team.
