Dallas producer to host screening of new film

Film producer Robert May, of Dallas, will host an opening of the critically acclaimed box office hit "The Station Agent" Friday, November 28 at the Cinemark in Moosic. The movie officially opens in that theater on November 26.

The November 28 screening will feature a question-and-answer session with producers May and Kathryn Tucker, both of SenArt Films. The Station Agent is "a beautifully-made comic drama that mixes warmth, emotional sophistication and dead on deadpan humor" (Los Angeles Times) that tells the story of three people with nothing in common except their desire for solitude — until chance circumstances bring their lives together.

The film has gained critical reviews and garnered eight awards to date, including the coveted Audience Award at the Sundance Film Festival. Elvis Mitchell of The New York Times calls it "hilarious and thoughtful — this is the kind of movie you want to share with others!"

"The Station Agent" was produced by the Pennsylvania-based SenArt Films, whose other projects include "Stevie," a critically-acclaimed film by Academy Award-nominated director Steve James, and the upcoming "The Fog of War," a film by Errol Morris, opening on December 26 and being released by Sony Picture Classics.
