The Mountaineers feature a prolific offense that includes one player who has 1,000 career points and three players who are closing in on that mark. Thomas achieved the feat last season, and Wentko, Hardwick and Lacey all have a bine with King to form a potent, but unselfish starting lineup, one in which players do not fear giving up the ball for the good of the club.

"If someone is hot, you just get them the ball," said Hardwick. "No one's selfish. No one's out there to get points. We play the best when we play as a team."

That team-oriented philosophy will carry beyond the starting lineup. Junior guard Cory Patton and junior forward Megan Savage will get the chance to make critical contributions off the bench.

Sophomores Cassie Snyder, Robin Razawich and Lisa Giacometti and junior Kristen Evans may all see varsity playing time as well.

varsity squad. He coached boys basketball at the junior high level for 15 years and served two years as a boys varsity head coach.

But as he begins his reign over the Lehman girls team, he inherits a roster that features only three players with significant varsity experience.

Lizzy Martin, the club's lone senior, leads the way. A former letter-winner, she'll start at guard. Junior Jodi Tripler and versatile sophomore Sheree Horvath both return to spearhead the inside attack.

Coombs and 5'9" junior center Jessica Turak round out the starting lineup.

Other players who will see action include forward Sam Krygier, sophomore guard Jill Chocallo, freshman guard Tina Watkins and forward Katharina Nockemann, an exchange student from Germany.

"Our goals are to make the district playoffs and win a playoff game," Spencer said.

Despite the lack of seasoned players on the roster, several team members believe such a possibility remains feasible.

"I think that just because who have played together for many years, the Mountaineers may depend on another factor as well — instinct.

"We know where we are on the court just because we've been playing together for so long," Thomas said, "and we're all like best friends on and off the court. Some teams don't have that, so that definitely helps us."

Dallas sported a 3-0 record through its first three games of exhibition play. The Moun taineers knocked off last year Class A state runner-up, Marian Catholic, 54-53 on Nov. 29 and beat the defending District 2 4A champ, Abington Heights, 72-39 on Dec 2.

The Black Knights have worked hard in the community as well. They helped provide food for an underprivileged family at Thanksgiving. They also plan to adopt a set of twin children from a financially disadvantaged family for Christmas and present them with food and gifts.

"It's a nice bunch of kids and they like being around each other," Spencer said.

Yet, more than anywhere else, the Lehman girls may find themselves most united on the basketball floor. That's where they will join together and try to surprise any doubters. It's where they will try to prove they can play the role of contenders.

"Nobody's expecting anything from us, so I think that makes us want to win even more," Martin said. "We're a scrappy team. We're young. But we have the heart to win.'
