Game processor pleads no contest to charges

DALLAS — Kevin N. Naugle, owner of Naugle Custom Butchery, Hunlock Creek, entered a "No Contest" plea on charges filed by the Pennsylvania Game Commission.

On May 17, Naugle entered the plea on two counts of buying and selling game and one count of unlawful taking and possession of game or wildlife in front of District Magistrate James Tupper, Trucksville. The plea agreement ended a two-year investigation conducted by the Pennsylvania Game Commission.

According to Wildlife Conservation Officer Jim Jolley, the investigation began after he started receiving complaints from successful hunters about the amount of meat being returned from their deer harvests. During the course of the investigation, Naugle allegedly sold more than 1,500 pounds of processed deer meat, which included kielbasa, bologna, summer sausage, ground meat and venison bacon.

Naugle faces revocation of his hunting and trapping privileges along with fines and costs totaling $3,000, plus $1,858 in restitution.
